The 1914 Hi-O-Hi

A Year Book of Oberlin College

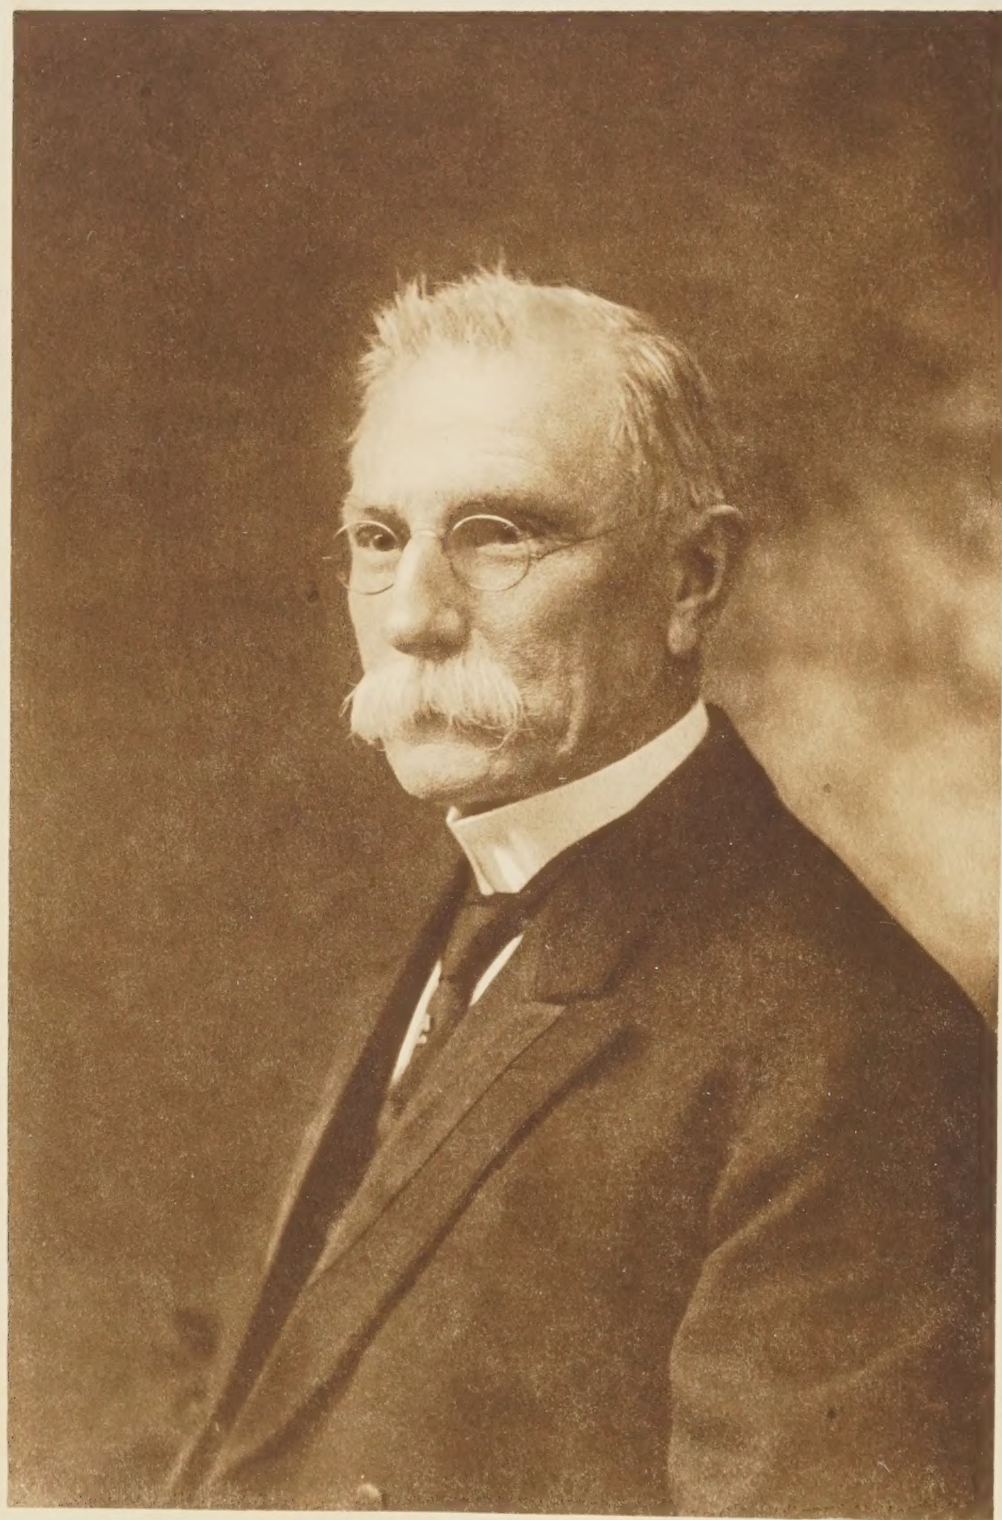

Published by
The Junior Class

VOLUME XXIV

Printed May, 1913

THE CHAMPLIN PRESS
COLUMBUS, OHIO

To Frank Fanning Jewett, Professor Emeritus
of Chemistry in Oberlin College.
this book is dedicated

PROFESSOR JEWETT began his work here in 1880. He came directly from Japan, after finishing a three-year contract as head of the Chemistry Department of the Imperial University. For thirty-two years he has headed the Chemistry Department in this College, retiring last spring on the Carnegie Foundation.

Professor Jewett's most tangible contribution to Oberlin is the excellence of Severence Chemical Laboratory. That the building stands today one of the very best in the country, aside of purely technical schools, is due largely to his detailed study of many such buildings, both here and abroad, and his careful planning that he might combine the best of all in this one. Under him, too, the department has taken rank at the head of the Science Departments in the College. And with all he has won for himself high respect and love from the many who have been his students.

Preface

Since the Oberlin HI-O-HI has become during its long life firmly established as the College annual, the publication of this twenty-fourth volume by the Class of 1914 needs no explanation of its scope.

To reflect fully in an annual the student life of Oberlin is a work at once fascinating and difficult. To observe all the currents of interest among two thousand students, and to comprehend them within three hundred odd pages, so that a clear idea is given to the stranger and a live record to the student himself, is doubly hard since the members of the Editorial Board themselves participate in that student life.

We have not attempted to enlarge the book beyond the limits of previous years. We have endeavored not to spend time and money upon non-essentials. To interpret as faithfully as possible without becoming catalogic has been our aim.

We are especially grateful to Mr. Cass Gilbert of New York City for furnishing the plans of the new Oberlin campus and to the College for permission to use them, together with other material, chiefly in the Alumni section.

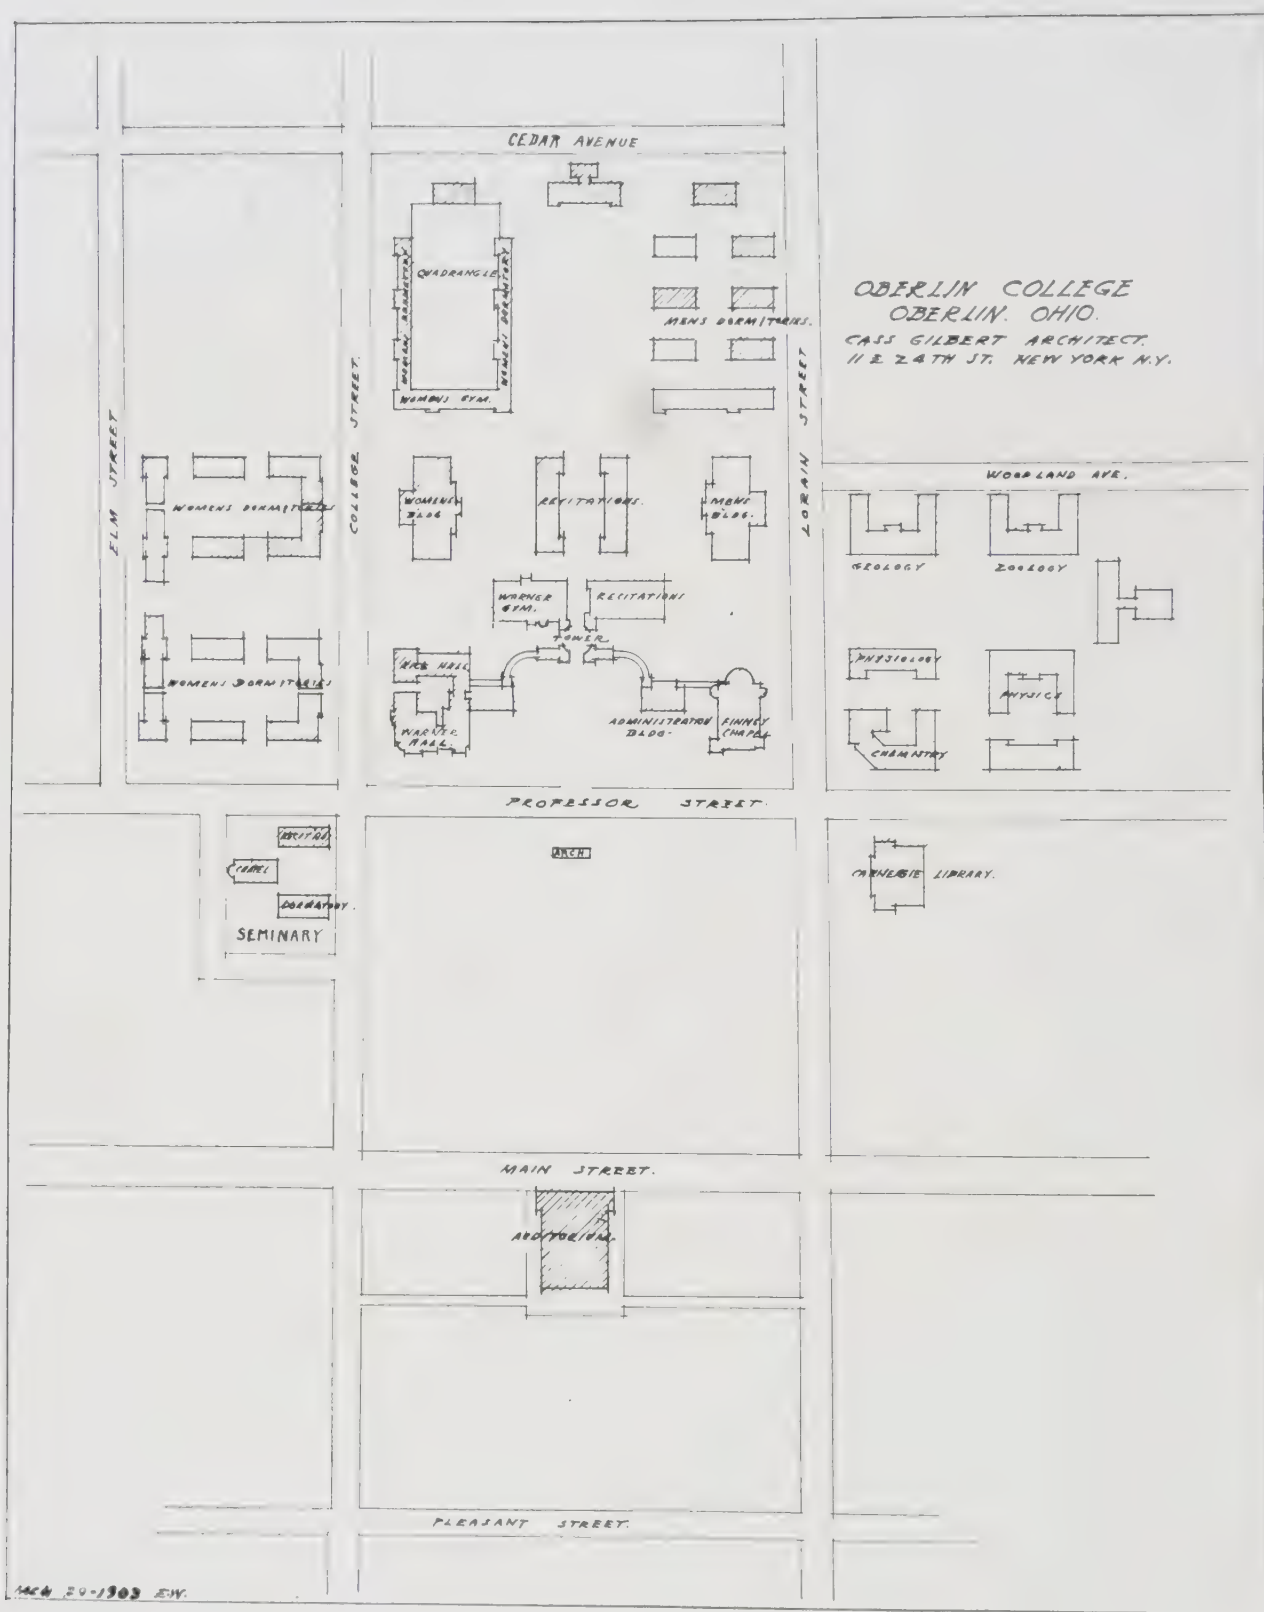

Grateful acknowledgment is due to all who have contributed art work and stunt material, especially when no prizes were given for such material, this year, in the belief that the talent with the pencil or kodak needs no subsidy. The obligations extend so widely to those who have written up the organizations, to members of former boards who have given the fruit of their experience, and to others co-operating in a thousand ways, that the book is really a creation of the whole body of students and faculty.

Attention is called to the advertising pages, that department to which earlier portions of the book owe so much for support. The excellence of future volumes will depend largely upon the value to advertisers of HI-O-HI space.

OBERLIN OF THE FUTURE

Where new College buildings are to stand. The above plan must be understood to be tentative only, though in line with the ideas of the Board of Trustees. It is likely to undergo considerable changes before completion and realization.

PAINTING BY R. C. NUSE

Strolling, strolling, over the campus in the spring
Hearts and voices praises of Oberlin sing;
Rising, falling, music is softly borne on the breeze,
While we are idly strolling under the old elm trees.

Yon ivied walls forming thy halls,
 Beautiful to see
Are loved over many a land.
There age and youth seeking the truth;
 Prizing liberty.
For learning and labor stand.
 Alma Mater, Alma Mater.
Hail to thee Oberlin, honored Mother!

Drink a toast to our school days,
Be good fellows while you may,
For tomorrow may bring sorrow,
So be joyful and be gay.

Praise the gold and the crimson,
Fill your glass up to the brim—
Drink a toast to Alma Mater,
Hail to thee, old Oberlin!

Man of Brawn, I cheer thee on,
Oberlin, my Oberlin;
Show thyself a worthy son,
Oberlin, my Oberlin;
When thy might is spent and gone,
When thy loyal deeds are done,
Show me then a vic'try won,
Oberlin, my Oberlin.

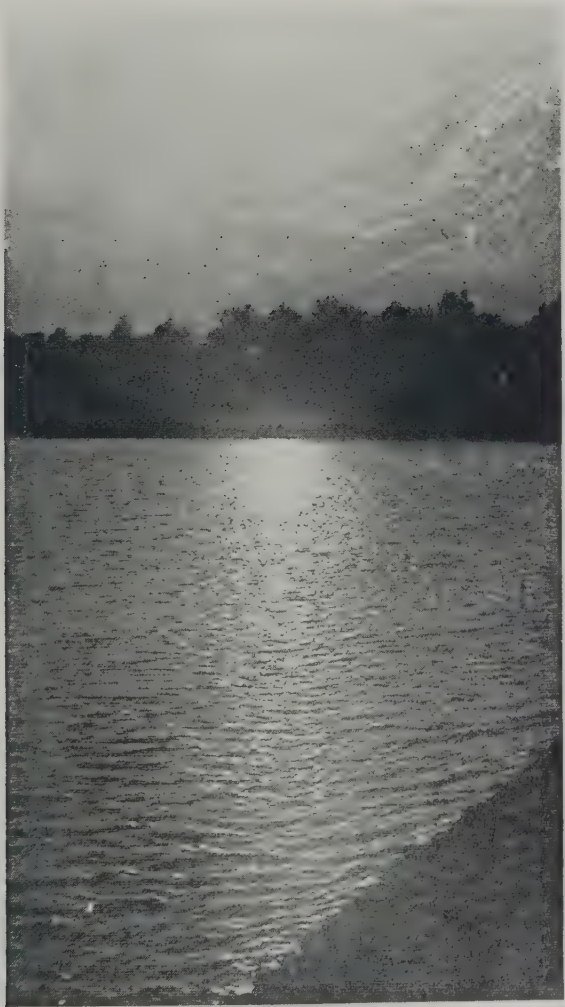

Oberlin, dear Alma Mater,
For evermore thy praise we'll sing;
Take from our lips our hearts' glad homage,
Which now to thee in song we bring.

Now when the heart is full of May-time,
And the days are filled with song;
When the sky sends nought but sunshine
On this happy blithesome throng,
Then the springtime's all brightness,
And the heartbeats are but lightness.

The College and Its Alumni

I am glad that the College Annual is finding a place in its issue this year for relations to the Alumni; for the relation of Alumni to their Alma Mater is a relation of peculiar intimacy and significance. The Alumni have had an opportunity to know the College thoroly from within—both its weaknesses and its strength. They have tested its educational methods and become familiar with its standards. They have had a part, as students, in determining its ideals. They have watched its growth, both from within and without. They are far enough removed from college life to give a fairly objective judgment. Many Alumni too have had experience as graduate students in other institutions, and are, so, able to bring helpful comparisons to bear in reaching and recording their judgments of their Alma Mater; tho, no doubt, here, the chief thing that the Alumnus needs to guard himself against is the assumption so frequently made, that things are just as they were when he was in college.

For such reasons as these, the opinions of the Alumni necessarily carry, and ought to carry, unusual weight in determining college policies. In the case of Oberlin, the Alumni elect directly one-fourth of the membership of the Board of Trustees. Beyond this, at present, as a matter of fact, eighteen of the twenty-five members of the board are Alumni of the College, and Alumni are largely represented, as well, of course in the faculty. The Alumni are the College, in no small degree. Ultimately the College is quite certain to reflect their spirit; its continuing cosmopolitan character, too, is made possible in no small degree by the Alumni. They are, themselves, the best evidence of the worth of the College, and its most natural defenders and supporters. If they do not believe in the College no one else can be expected to. A lukewarmness on the part of the Alumni, thus, is naturally interpreted as meaning that the College does not deserve hearty support.

It becomes of the first importance, therefore, that the frankest and most cordial relations possible should exist between any college and its former students. Other college men have often spoken to me of what they felt was the unusual and enthusiastic loyalty of Oberlin Alumni. And Oberlin certainly cannot complain that its Alumni have not generously supported it. It is, of course, true, that thruout its history so large a portion of the Alumni, have gone into preaching and teaching that the financial ability of the Alumni, as a whole, has never been large. But this record of ideal service is, itself, a record of achievement, and a legitimate cause of pride, and it has given Oberlin Alumni who have been naturally interested in seeing that many other young people found their way to the College. It is in line with this record in the professions of preaching and teaching, that it has been recently found that over one-sixth of all the missionaries of the American Board in active service, have been either students of Oberlin College or Oberlin Seminary.

The number of graduates now looking to business, is naturally larger than in the earlier years, and will in time afford to the College a larger number of Alumni capable of bringing to their Alma Mater great resources. But even in the past, it has been true that many of the most significant gifts to the College have come from its own graduates. In any case, the faith, the loyalty, the enthusiasm, the character, and the service of its Alumni body, are more to the College than money, and in the end are certain to insure for it even such material means as may be needed.

The College rejoices in this best of all wealth that it has in its Alumni, and hopes for still closer and more helpful relation between the College and its Alumni. It hopes to serve as well as to be served; and it sends, once more, to its former students everywhere, thru this new channel of the College Annual, its hearty and faithful greetings.

HENRY CHURCHILL KING.

The Thirteeniad

(With all due apology to Mr. Virgil).

Deeds and the men I sing of thirteen's valiant crew,
 On campus altar where the ashes lie
 Of many a victory's offerings to the gods,
 Where glowing embers now alone remain
 To tell of note-books, registration blanks
 And catalogues from days of long ago—
 Were poured with solemn chant from out a vial
 Drops from the vanished fount of Freshman tears,
 With hope to bind the magic spell. And lo!
 A dense white smoke now drifted up therefrom.
 But as a veil of mist, it cleared away,
 Revealing there a goddess, truly radiant,
 The ever-glorious Spirit of Thirteen.

"Your journey draws unto its close,"—she spoke
 In voice like to an organ's swelling tones,
 "Right bravely have you fought your way along
 From those first days you found yourselves enmeshed
 In weeds of those snaky joining lines.
 Clad in your flannel tunics white and blue
 You overwhelmed the daughty men of 'twelve.'
 Charybdis—'Trig' and Scylla—'Analyt'
 Were passed with scarce a loss from out your ship
 Famed Circe, 'Outside-Interests,' drained a few
 And Siren 'Rule-breaking' ensnared still more,
 While Polyphemus 'Raised-Efficiency'
 With stalking-club, a 'D,' did threaten you.
 In games and sports of every kind you've shown;
 In baseball and on muddy plains of Dill
 Your records stand the aim of future years.
 O well and bravely have you fought your way
 By Martin, Clarence, Louis, and now Laird
 Have you been wisely led. Your hardy crew
 Is quite the largest which has e'er attained
 That harbor—sought, yet dreaded—Outside-World.
 Hence will you scatter over all the land,
 Battles and monsters you will always find,
 But courage gained on this most glorious cruise
 Will always mark the men of Thirteen's ship.
 And now farewell! For saffron dawn draws nigh."

Yet stay, O wond'rous Spirit, what of you?

"No mortal maid am I, to fade with years.
 For time will add each June more charms, more glow.
 I am the creature of your thoughts and love
 For one another and for Oberlin.
 I am your loyalty and faith in one,
 Personified through all the years to come."

—RENE K. MOREY.

The Class That Boasts the Banner Gray and Crimson

(With apologies to Rudyard Kipling.)

“What is the bell a’ringin’ for?” said Peters-round-the-Court.
“To welcome us to Oberlin,” the verdant Freshman said.
“What makes your grin so broad, so broad?” said Peters-round-the-Court.
I’m thinkin’ what you’re goin’ to see,” the verdant Freshman said.
“They’re breakin’ in us Freshies—you can hear the Sophomores yell;
The Faculty’s in cap an’ gown, they’re goin’ to test us well,
But we’ll spring our class distinction an’ we’ll thwart their purpose fell,
We’re the class that boasts the banner grav and crimson.”

"What makes the Sophomores look so queer?" said Peters-round-the-Court.
"The Tackie Party is tonight," the gay young Sophomore said.
"What makes that neat young man act thus?" said Peters-round-the-Court.
"The constable's a-pinchin' 'im," the gay young Sophomore said.
"We're showin' other classes what the Sophomore class can do,
An' the Profs we are a'tellin' that we know a thing or two.
We are cuttin' down expenses in a way that's wholly new
We're the class that boasts the banner gray and crimson."

"What makes you Juniors work so 'ard?" said Peters-round-the-Court.
"We're editin' the Hi-O-Hi," the jolly Junior said.
"What makes you Juniors rant an' rave?" said Peters-round-the-Court.
"We're tryin' for the Junior Play," the jolly Junior said.
"We're thinkin' of a party that was somewhat tackie, too;
"We're laughin' at the rabbits that one man will ever rue;
We're tellin' o'er the story as to 'ow our glory grew,
We're the class that boasts the banner grey and crimson."

"What is it fills your soul with woe?" said Peters-round-the-Court.
"Our Senior Bible looms a-'ead," the jolly Junior said.
"What makes you look so 'appy like?" said Peters-round-the-Court.
"We've finished with our Chemistry," the jolly Junior said.
"The days of Psych an' Art are gone; past is Philosophy;
We are the last on whom dread Math can forced be.
An' for our many blessings we're as 'appy as can be—
We're the class that boasts the banner gray and crimson."

Mr. Dooley on the Sophomore Class

(With apologies to Peter Finley Dunne.)

"Well, sir," said Mr. Hennessey, "It mus' be gran' to belong to this Sophomore Class, an' no longer live in obscurity."

"It must that," said Mr. Dooley. "It's the gran' class entirely. Fr'm all I can learn about it fr'm the Re-view i's kept all the' thraditions in th' College, an' added a few more besides.

"I larned that last year in their annoal scrap, they gave it good to th' prisint Jooniors. But, an' a sad fact it is, this year retribooshun overtook thim, an' they carried them off th' field worn out, poor ki-ids. Did that destroy their courage, you ask? Inside iv a month they was up an' wipin' th' ithers off fr'm th' field with their football team! An' with three of their noomber on the Varsity, an Irishman wan iv them, tho' th' ithers be fine b'ys too. An' this I wud tell ye is only wan iv the sports they excel in.

"In course they mus' have their fling in oratory, an' airly they byegan. It was in their first class meeting, I recall. A jood fr'm the East made a speech. He was ca'm, dignified, a perfect masther iv himself an' his adjeence. An' they have two ithers with silvry tongues an' fond iv makin' speeches. An' what did they do, ye ask? They collected th' matherial an' wrote th' speeches f'r th' big debates while th' Seniors and Junioors gat th' frenzied applause. 'Tis a quare wuruld, in which we live.

"As a class, howiver, they're a wurry to th' college. They're too fond iv excitement. I raymem-

ber well a little p'rrade iv theirs. 'Twas a long wan an' th' gurrils tuk part. In th' exoobérance iv their young spirits they marched through th' campus without respect for th' feelings iv anywan, least iv all the Freshmen. Let us hape whin they're oulder, they will larn wisdom an' controll themselves.

"An' then parrties! It's th' j'y iv their hearts to attind them. So galla-ant a'are th' lads, an' so pretty th' maidens, it does me ould heart good to look at thim. F'r a rale good time, Hinmissy, ye shud go to wan iv their doin's.

"In their shtudies their wurrk is such that they are all headed f'r th' Phi Beta Kappa, their Professors tell me. An' so bright a-are-they that they wurrk only in their le-eshur hours. Profissor Wolfe told me that in Economics th' gurrils were shmarter thin th' b'ys. Howiver, no rale bus'ness man nades to know Economics. Th' knowledge iv business is bornn in him.

"But, after all, Hinmissy, 'tis a gran' class they a-are, an' th' pride iv their almy mather."

The Humble Freshman

Hearken, O Muse, from your regions cerulean,
 Come to my aid, Kid!—Now don't answer "Nix!"
 Help me, I beg, in this labor Herculean,
 Help me to celebrate fitly One Six.

Nerve me to sing the sublime virtues resident
 In all the wearers of Yellow and Blue,
 From me, their laureate, up to their President:
 Every one ought to be in the "Who's Who!"

Further, moreover, whoever has seen us is Filled with amazement, for, wond'rous to tell,
 Each man's a Crichton, the girls are all Venuses;
 We take the cake, and we win the bell.

And should you, reader, accuse us of bumptiousness,
 Pause, now I pray, ere starting to fret;
 Only consider the wonderful scrumptiousness
 Of us, and then you won't blame us, I'll bet!

All former Freshies, of whatso precocity
 Placed once beside us (and true is the rune),
 Fade all at once into deep vacuosity,
 Just as the stars do, at twelve o'clock noon.

Who are the victors in regions athletical,
Basket ball, football, and track—eh, Pauline?
No, child, this question is not hypothetical,
You know the answer—the class of '16.

And now, lest you should accuse us of shyness or Backwardness, I shall just frankly admit
Nothing so foxy's been seen since the Dinosaur;
Yes! you have guessed it; we're certainly IT.

Finally, whom is the Hi-O-Hi printed for?
Who put the "Oh!" in Oberlin, Jeanne?
Whom, as Pat says, was this Planit invinted for?
Blushingly, shyly, we own it—'16.

Flauntingly, proud as a golden October lin,
(That is the month of the Yellow and Blue!)
Culminate flower of our sturdy old Oberlin,
Glorious '16! My hat's off to you.

JOHN M. MCCLELLAND.

Oberlin Conservatory of Music

The unique position which the Oberlin Conservatory holds in its relation to the College is due partly to its history. The Conservatory grew, it was not created by the fiat of any president, board, or committee. It was implicit in the very educational idea of the founders. Remarkable, is it not, that a college started in the wilderness, on the frontier, remote from the chief centers of culture, should have been almost, if not quite the first to perceive in music a social force and efficient agent in individual development? It only needed the right man to work out this conception, and build up a musical department worthy of association with a college of national renown. Such a one was found in the person of Fenelon B. Rice. His name will always stand beside the names of Eben Tourjee, Theodore Thomas, and the other great leaders of musical education in America.

Since Professor Rice laid down his task, the Conservatory has made still further progress in the direction towards which he persistently led it. The Conservatory stands for two ideas in education, over which the advocates of each continually dispute. Its work is both vocational and cultural:—it gives thorough training to those who are to make music their special life work, and it also stands as a radiant point for certain of those fine influences that soften and nourish the life of the spirit. These influences it exerts not only upon its own students but also upon the whole community. The College of Arts and Sciences acknowledges its importance by granting liberal credits for musical work, wisely accepting the truth of Maeterlinck's saying, that "The man who enriches his sensibility, enriches his intelligence." Oberlin, in so many ways a pioneer, is a leader among American colleges also in this, that it accepts and follows the truth declared by the great Scotsman, Professor John Stuart Blackie, that "Poetry, painting, music, and the fine arts generally, fall under the category, not of an accidental accomplishment, but of an essential and most noble blossom of a cultivated soul."

The long rays of the rising sun are glancing through the campus elms. Just as the distant whistles proclaim the hour of seven, a stream of men pours forth from an old, square-faced, brick building north of the campus. They are evidently in great haste. Some are struggling into coats. Others are making frantic efforts to conquer rebellious ties. In single file, they scamper along the cinder path at break-neck speed. There is nothing alarming or unusual in the sight. No, this is not the Oberlin track team. Nor is it that valiant band of heroes, the Volunteer Fire Department, responding to the shrieks of the siren. It is merely the Chaplain Trust—the Theologues—on their way to breakfast.

Do you demand further proof that the Seminary students are progressive (for progress seems to be the motto of the age and of the Annual)? Recall then, if you will, our basket ball five, twice victors over the college class champions. We boast of an increased enrollment and a strengthened Faculty. We remember with pride two banquets, one addressed by Dr. Rauschenbusch, and a picnic. It is our sincere hope that we are making progress in many directions—that our sermons sometimes get there after the “finally, brethren”; that our struggle with Greek and Hebrew is not altogether futile; that out of the toil and turmoil there is developing some measure of future usefulness.

We believe, also, that there is progress in our friendship with the other men of Oberlin. We are grateful for the friendly welcome you give us.. We are glad to join in the Hi-O-Hi at game or rally, to beat you at hand ball or basket ball, to talk with you in discussion group or friendly visit. We are glad—yes, we are mighty glad—that we are Oberlin Theologues.

The problem of the Students' Union of Oberlin Theological Seminary, like that of the class in college, must deal with the demands of the people, and it does so in much the same way, the way of systematic organization by means of officers and committees. Its stated purpose is the religious and social welfare of its members; it recognizes the needs of its constituency by a broad interpretation of this purpose. The weekly prayer-meeting would usually be considered distinctly religious; the picnic of last fall at Birmingham was famously social; we might speak of the splendid banquet of the Union at the Thanksgiving season as religiously social; the presence of Professor Rauschenbusch at the Theta banquet during the winter could not make this event anything other than socially religious; and a successful basket ball season is a reminder that we must not allow the terms "social" and "religious" to limit our interpretation of the meaning of welfare, for the Seminary Union encourages athletics as conducive to welfare. Welfare is its worthful goal, and we submit with modest confidence that the activities of the year 1912-1913 have had a real ministry to the needs of men training to lead in the life-long fight for welfare.

Six months and a day after the signing of the Declaration of Independence, the Phi Beta Kappa fraternity was organized at William and Mary College, Williamsburg, Virginia, it being thus the oldest Greek-letter fraternity in the country. It was first organized as a social and literary club, and the strictest secrecy on all points of ritual and proceedings was preserved. (The present "key" is the development of the original secret emblem.) Soon after the opening of the nineteenth century, however, the attempt at secrecy was abandoned, and before long membership in the organization became a reward for high merit in scholarship.

The Oberlin Chapter was established in November, 1907. As in the case of all other chapters, this was done under a charter granted by the United Chapters of Phi Beta Kappa, the official National organization. There are at present seventy-seven chapters affiliated in the National Association, the Oberlin Chapter being the sixty-fourth in the order of founding. The chapters in each State are named by the letters of the Greek alphabet in the order of their organization. Oberlin thus stands as the Zeta, or sixth, chapter of Ohio.

Elections to the society, admitting one-eighth of the members from each graduating class, have been regularly made in Oberlin since 1907. The distinction has also been conferred upon the same proportion of all the classes that had previously graduated from the College. While the details of the system of elections in force in the various colleges differ somewhat, in each approximately this proportion—one-eighth—is chosen in some places during the Senior year, in others during the Senior and Junior years.

The Women's Senate was first organized as a preparatory step toward a certain amount of self-government. The Senate has a two-fold purpose. In the first place the Senate is to act as a medium between faculty and students. Secondly, the Senate is primarily interested in the student body and is anxious to do everything possible to advance its welfare. It is a part of the Senate's duty to consider, organize, and advance any interest which is exclusively a woman's interest.

In line with its primary purpose the Senate has worked out and submitted to the faculty a scheme for limiting the outside activities of women. The Senate has been consulted by the faculty in regard to the program of Washington's Birthday and in regard to the question of chapel attendance.

A few definite privileges have been obtained for the girls. Nine-thirty permission on Saturday nights during the Spring term has been granted Junior and Senior young women by the Women's Board. The Women's Board through the Senate has also given over to the student body the privilege of self-government at the Lake during Spring vacation. The Senate has made the girls' sings a real live element in the college life.

In co-operation with the Men's Senate a general election system and a general pay-day system have been instituted. Jointly the Senates have extended the field of the Honor System.

It is the privilege of the Senates of the future to train the student body to a higher sense of responsibility so that greater powers of self-government may be entrusted to it. And it is the great privilege of the student body to show a deepening desire and capacity for self-government.

There are doubtless those among both the student body and the faculty who look askance at the Men's Senate. Some students look upon the Senate as a sort of student discipline committee, in collusion with the faculty, to spot smokers, Sunday evening fussers and the other parasites in our student body. Such ignorance of the institutions upon the Senate as a necessary evil, "an excellent body to make recommendations." They forget that the Senate has actually done something during the seven years of its existence. They are not interested in the college sings, the class rush and a host of other traditions which have been crystalized into permanent customs by the Men's Senate. They forget the Honor System, the General Election Day, the Auditing System and the newly established General Payday, all of which have made a real contribution to our college life. True support of the Senate demands a knowledge of its object and purpose. The constitution declares that, "The object of the Men's Senate is to consider questions of college interest both from the point of view of the faculty and from the point of view of the students, and to encourage wise and needful legislation and to strive in all honorable and proper ways to advance the interests promotive of the life and well-being of Oberlin College." The key note upon which the Men's Senate was established was that of co-operation; co-operation between the faculty and the students in a common cause, the welfare of our Alma Mater. The Senate was first organized by the student body, its members are elected by the student body, its future success depends upon the support of the student body. Let the faculty and the students co-operate through the medium of the Senate for the best interests of "Old Oberlin."

The Conservatory Women's Board

In the year 1901 the Conservatory Women's Board was organized under the leadership of several prominent young women of that year. The object was to represent the interests of the women of the Conservatory to the faculty, to confer with the Dean on matters concerning the student interests, and to assist in all Conservatory social activities, such as the Annual Reception, the Thanksgiving Party, and the dances.

Since the organizing of the Women's Board, a marked change has taken place in the general spirit of the Conservatory. During the year the Women's Board has conferred with the Dean on problems concerning chapel attendance, and the new problems connected with the Advisory Board. On questions of general interest to both College and Conservatory women, the College and Conservatory Senates meet in a general senate.

The efficiency of the board greatly depends upon the interest and co-operation of its members, whose election rests upon the student body. It is this responsibility that we give to our succeeding boards.

The Conservatory Men's Board

A new acquisition to the Conservatory in the last five years is the Senate of the Musical Department, composed of the Men's and the Women's Boards. They are to the Conservatory what the senates are to the College. It might be well to speak of a few of the things essential to school life that these two bodies of young people carry on.

First, there is the annual Conservatory reception, given in Rice Hall for all Conservatory students and faculty, especially for the new students. Secondly, the Thanksgiving party, gotten up by the boards and faculty for the benefit of the students, in order to make the day an enjoyable one for many who have nothing to do. In the third place there are the social functions which are held by the boards alone, and which cement the friendships of the board members. Besides these social times they have many private meetings with the faculty and the deans of the Conservatory. In doing this the faculty and boards help one another to a great extent, perhaps greater than one would think.

The Honor Court of the Conservatory is run on the same principles as the Honor Court of the College. Lastly the boards do many deeds of kindness, which are not known outside their own ranks, such as sending flowers to faculty members who may be sick. The boards are a help to the institution and should be supported loyally by the faculty and students, in whatever they undertake.

Confessions of a Senior Counselor

In the first place I am a sinful person. I knew it from the moment when I was chosen by my own classmates as one of forty to stand as guides to the new college generation. Most humbly I undertook to console, admonish, and entertain four flesh-and-blood Freshmen.

It was Peggy who found me at my "office hour." "I've come for advice," said Peggy solemnly. "What can I do for you, Peggy?" I asked professionally. "Well, I've cut a class." "Horrors, Peggy! Why?" "Well, I was sick and didn't know they were going to have a test, and when I got there and found it was a test, I got up and went out. What shall I do?" trembled Peggy. "Oh," I said, weighing my words, "I think you had better get permission to make up the test."

It was Kate who came "exam" week to tell me she had flunked "Trig." She did not come for consolation. The tears stayed resolutely behind her lashes. She came merely for advice concerning her schedule in view of the flunk. Since she would not weep I could not weep with her. Therefore I laughed. "I can't be properly consoling," I said, "till flunk notices are out." "But he said if I flunked the exam, I flunked the course, and I did three questions wrong." "Hm," I remarked. And we went to the greenhouse and together picked out a primrose for Kate's room. About two weeks later I met Kate on the street. "I forgot to tell you," she said, "that I went to the Professor and asked him what had become of my flunk notice and he said, 'Why, you didn't fail.'"

Suddenly my sinful state was again thrust upon me. I had four Freshmen to advise and had only met three. In deep contrition, during Christmas week I sent a card to the Freshman I had never met. I made a New Year's resolution to make up for neglected duty. My resolution had scarce revived when it collapsed before the grippe. And then into my room that unknown Freshman came and laid beside me two lovely rose buds and gently said, "To my ill advisor," or—dreadful thought—could it have been "To my ill-advisor?"

Oberlin's Cosmopolitanism

The first Oberlin catalogue contained this significant statement: "The object of Oberlin College shall be the diffusion of useful science, sound morality, and pure religion among the growing multitudes of the Mississippi Valley. It aims also at bearing an important part in extending these blessings to the destitute millions which overspread the earth."

Upon such a foundation Oberlin has kept the faith of the fathers. From the early forties, when David Livingstone sent his brother Charles from England for his degree, the college has numbered a steadily increasing constituency. At present, with an enrollment of 1768, Oberlin draws from every state and territory in the Union, from America's island dependencies, and from the following foreign countries: Albania, Australia, Brazil, Canada, China, Cuba, India, Jamaica, Japan, Mexico, Micronesia, Norway, Persia, South Africa, Spain, Turkey.

In the spirit of their inheritance, thirty years ago a band of Oberlin men established in North China an educational project fashioned after their Alma Mater. Today, the New Oberlin in Shansi counts six hundred students with a faculty of over thirty, and is already an aggressive factor in developing the Chinese Republic.

The Balkan crisis, too, has been unusually interesting to Oberlin through the enrollment as a graduate student of Kristo Anastas Dako, of Kortcha, Albania. Mr. Dako is a recognized authority on the Balkan problem, and has had a large share in securing autonomy for his native land.

With twenty-three alumni associations in various parts of the country, and scattered throughout the world thirty-eight thousand men and women who have studied within her walls during the last three quarters of a century, it is not surprising to find a survey by the federal Bureau of Education listing Oberlin as the second most cosmopolitan institution of learning in America.

ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR PHILIP D. SHERMAN.

Oberlin and Shansi

The first Oberlin man to reach China was M. L. Stimson, '81. In 1882 he went up into Shansi, and passed over the old trail, worn by countless caravans, and through the "Heavenly Gates" that crown the summits of the mountains forming the eastern barrier of Shansi. He found but two mission stations in all the province and was in fact the first representative of an American society to seek a location.

His mission came ultimately to occupy the commercial center of the province in Taiku, and perhaps the most important literary center, Fenchow, a city rich in schools and traditions of scholarship. The founders of the mission planned to begin educational work as soon as possible. In due time little groups of believers were gathered, and schools for boys and girls were opened in both stations.

The educational ideals for the Mission were beginning to be realized when, in the summer of 1900, the fanatical hatred of foreigners gathered in one huge storm cloud and burst in the terrible "Boxer" rebellion. On July 31 the six missionaries in Taiku were brutally murdered in their mission compound outside the city, and on August 15th two families in the Fenchow station were treacherously cut down some twelve miles east of the city. The work of both stations was totally demoralized.

The renewal after 1900 was in many respects more difficult than the actual pioneering had been. Months of disorder following the great upheaval were a seed-sowing for all the forces of evil. Nevertheless, order was gradually evolved from the prevailing confusion. In this work Dr. I. J. Atwood, '81, displayed great courage and statesmanship. Gradually the ground that had been lost was much more than recovered. Certain outstanding features since 1900 might be mentioned.

The Oberlin-Shansi Memorial Academy was opened in 1907 with H. H. K'ung, '06, as principal. Four classes have been graduated. The present enrollment is about eighty.

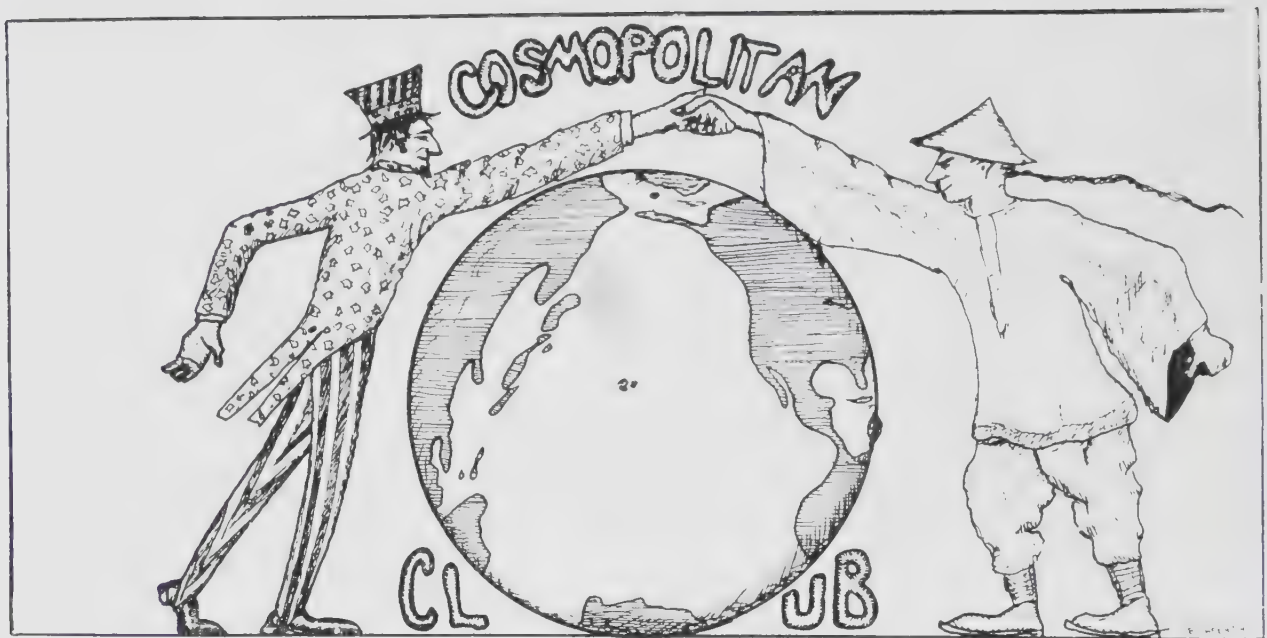

The idea in the minds of the Mission is not, however, to concentrate their energies upon a single institution. The plan is for a system of affiliated and carefully graded schools. As stated in its constitution, the purpose of the Association is to carry on the educational work of the Shansi Mission, but as yet the Association has taken only a part of the school work of the Mission under its charge. The plan is to have an academy for girls at Fenchow, where there is already a first class grammar school for boys known as the Atwater Memorial. The policy is to spare no expense in securing the most competent native teachers, and that policy has been abundantly justified in results obtained.

The name of this enterprise embodies its ruling idea. It is a living and Christian memorial. In a growing plant we have the best possible monument to the Oberlin men and women who fell on that field in 1900. The tone of all the schools is positively and constructively Christian, and in the Academy at Taiku more than half the students are volunteers for service as teachers and preachers among their own people.

It is no light thing to attach the name of Oberlin to an enterprise. We dare to do it in connection with the Shansi enterprise because we are endeavoring to realize there the ideals of sound and thorough scholarship, the inspiration to unselfish service, a broad and catholic outlook on life, and a real and vital Christian faith. In the zealous cultivation of these ideals the Oberlin representatives in Shansi are developing along sound lines the "Oberlin-Shansi Memorial."

One might dream of a visit with friends in Jamaica, China, Japan, India, Turkey, Albania, or in the northern or southern continent of our own hemisphere; but in Oberlin the energy thus required might better be conserved by dreamless sleep. One but needs to look in upon a miniature Congress of Nations gathered on alternate Mondays in the parlors of Council Hall to find friends from all these countries, and more; sharers in a friendship which encircles the globe.

Nor is this possible in Oberlin alone. The idea of cosmopolitan brotherhood is not even a distinctively American ideal, as is evident from the fact that next September an International Conference of Cosmopolitan Clubs is to meet in Buffalo, New York.

Cosmopolitanism is a movement looking for a better understanding better races and nations. It undertakes the annihilation of prejudice and the upbuilding of a larger brotherliness among those whose preparation puts them in line for leadership among their own people. And the American student may not consider himself free from prejudice as long as he is unwilling to assume seriously his responsibility as a builder of a larger brotherhood of men. The world needs the Cosmopolitan spirit.

Student Volunteers

Only twenty-seven of the Student Volunteers of last year were back in the fall. But those who joined the Band this year together with those who came from other institutions and from other years in Oberlin have raised the number to sixty-seven, making the Band probably as large as any in the country. Yet, for all its size, the Band has been a working unit. Perhaps because of their undergraduate leaders, the members have assumed a keener individual responsibility to the Band. Because of this the regular meetings have been large and inspiring, the open meetings unusually well attended.

The deputation work has also grown to exceed that of former years. More than twenty-five deputations have been sent out, some going even as far as Cleveland and Columbus. But most important of all to record is that fifteen Oberlin students went last year to do Christian work in other countries.

It is the purpose of the Young Women's Christian Association to unite the women of this institution in loyalty to Jesus Christ, to lead them to accept Him as their personal Savior, and to build them up in the knowledge of Christ, through Bible study and Christian service.

Every year finds the work of the Association broadening, and still it is always necessary to aim for new interest in familiar things. In trying to define the place of this organization in the school life, we have felt that the religious character should be the dominant note, and that all other phases of work were but means to this end.

The practical work this year included six hundred visits to old ladies and invalids, work at the Centennial, and the organization of normal Camp Fire groups, with two hundred girls enrolled. In addition to this, money has been raised for new furniture for the rest room in Peters Hall and the employment bureau has furnished work amounting to two thousand dollars.

New interest in the Association was aroused in the fall when the time-honored reception gave place to a large picnic around the camp fire; and again later when "Mr. Budget" was presented at a free chicken-pie spread. Evidence of the new support is shown by a fifty percent. increase in the attendance at the Sunday night meetings, and the enrollment of three hundred in mission study classes. This new interest served, too, as a background for the special work before the Day of Prayer. As a result Miss Holmquist was able to bring to many the sense of personal friendship with Christ, and a conception of the value of a vital prayer life.

The Student Commission, by looking with critical eyes at the work of the Association, has succeeded in eliminating wasteful expenditures of time and means. It has also brought helpful suggestions from other associations.

Look over the faces of the men who make up the Y. M. C. A. Cabinet. They are the busiest men in college. The varsity debater, the orator, the editor, the football player, all have found time for this additional activity. They believe in the work of the Association. They are glad to take a large share in the concrete work for the town and the college. The Y. M. C. A. is one of the few institutions affording an opportunity for the practical expression of the spirit to serve others. Twenty men serving in executive positions of service, one hundred and ten men working in associate positions of usefulness besides many others who help on special occasions,—this is the great achievement of the Association. It gives an outlet for the college man's desire to show the brotherly spirit.

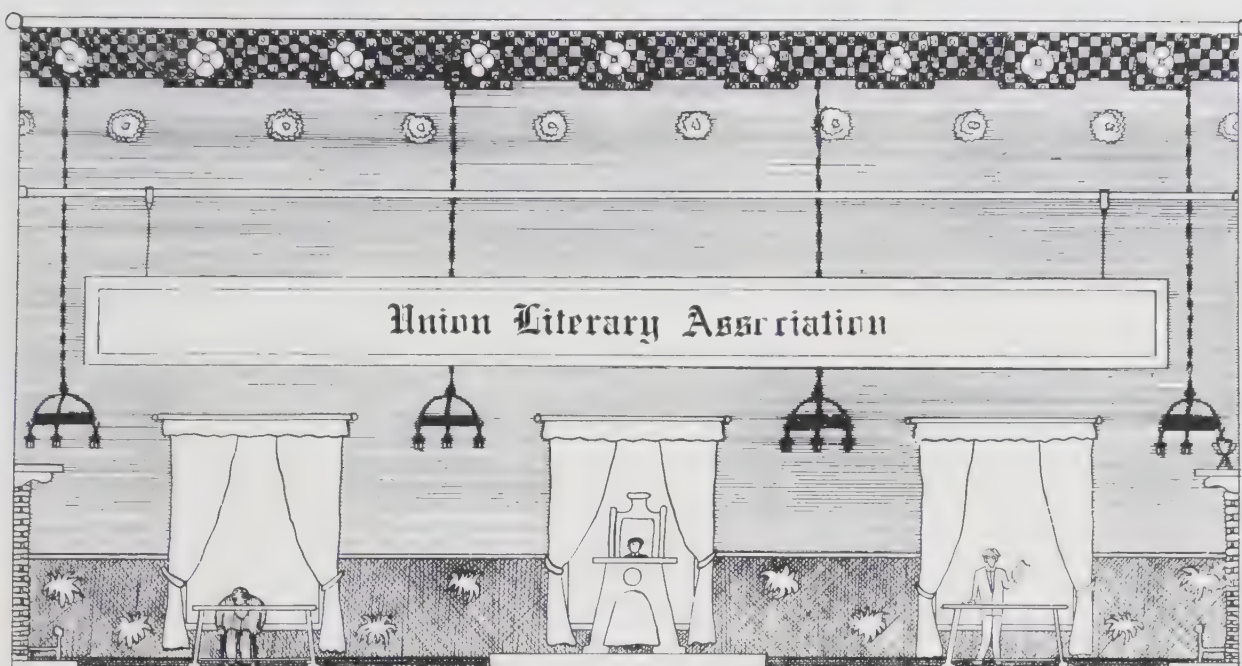

If the aim of the Oberlin Christian Association is "To be of the greatest service to the college and the community," what results have been achieved? Under the efficient leadership of Secretaries Hubbard and Bradley new methods have been initiated and old policies continued. Through our employment department we have tried to help those who need workers by supplying them with students needing employment. If our Bible and Mission study classes have broadened the interests of a single student they have not failed. We have seen the growth of our boys work until there are over a hundred boys enrolled in clubs meeting weekly. By securing strong speakers and by initiating exceptional and interesting musical programs, our Sunday night meetings have averaged an attendance of nearly a hundred more than last year. It is the scattered intangible work for others which cannot be expressed that really counts for the most. We have made mistakes, we have really failed in many ways but we have made a sincere and honest effort to fulfill our aim, "To be of the greatest service to the college and the community."

The Union Literary Association is a queer organization. It has some officers and a new constitution. Occasionally it has a meeting, and transacts some business. This superficial estimate of the organization is perhaps justified to those people who have no connection with the literary interests of the college.

But after all the U. L. A. is performing a needed function here in school. Our literary interests are extensive. They include the activities of seven societies, college oratory, intercollegiate debate, and the publication of two student journals. The Union Literary Association forms a happy means of binding these general interests together into one group, and of directing them with one policy under one management. All of them receive added stimulation by reason of the fact that they form a union for the promotion of each other. And it may safely be said that if any one of these student enterprises were deprived of the support of the Association, its work would be severely hindered in consequence.

This year the patrons of the U. L. A. are to be congratulated on a highly successful lecture course. Judging from the experience of the last two seasons it became evident that the course had to be strengthened, or it would have to be given up entirely. Students were demanding a better quality of entertainment. Accordingly, the course was shortened, and the highest grade lectures were secured. Students and townspeople alike have enjoyed the remarkable lectures of Captain Amundsen, Charles Rann Kennedy, Prof. Willis Moore, and Doctor Wiley. Surely the present management has succeeded in making the course one of the valuable attractions in the college.

In the immediate future the U. L. A. has two large services to perform: To stimulate further interest in oratory; and to put the Monthly on a stronger basis. Whatever the Association accomplishes in this direction will be satisfying a real need, and will be doing something distinctly worth while.

The Oberlin Art Association

The Oberlin Art Association was founded in the Fall of 1912 at the suggestion of the Chairman of the College Committee on Art Interests. The need of such an association has long been felt in Oberlin and after considerable discussion in the Committee it was felt that the time had come for its formation.

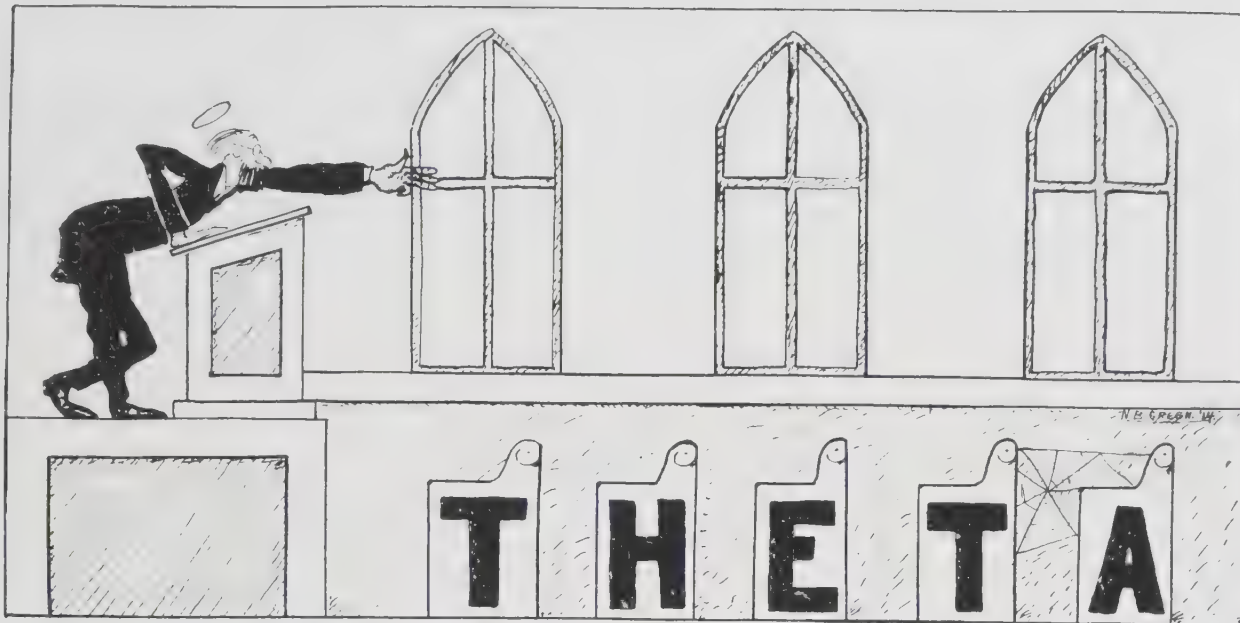

From the beginning the idea met with favor and about two hundred and fifty persons were found who were willing to give the Association financial support. The College very generously gave permission to use one of the rooms in French Hall for exhibition purposes and this was fitted up at considerable expense. The walls were covered with burlap and an indirect lighting system installed so that the pictures may be seen to the very best advantage.

The year's program was auspiciously opened by Mr. Lawrence Binyon of the British Museum who delivered three lectures: "Art and Thought in the East and the West," "Portraiture and Heroic Art," and "The Renaissance and a Parallel from the Far East," November 20-21. Two lectures were given by Dr. Daniel A. Heubsch, of New York, on "Rembrandt," February 14; and "Rodin" February 28. Professor C. B. Martin lectured on "American Painting" February 20.

The exhibition room was opened by a loan exhibition of the paintings belonging to Mr. and Mrs. Homer Johnson of Cleveland, January 21-25 and February 3-8. An exhibition of photographs of American paintings published by the Detroit Publishing Company was held February 15-18. The value of both these exhibitions was greatly increased by lectures on the subjects shown by Miss Eva M. Oakes, Professor A. S. Kimball and Mr. R. C. Nuse.

The Association expects to hold two more exhibitions before the close of the school year. One is to be an exhibition of etchings and engravings loaned by the Keppell Company and the other an exhibition of some of the work of Professor Kimball, Miss Oakes, Miss Severance, and Mr. Nuse.

Theta Club made its appearance in 1908. Since that time it has been progressing steadily and rapidly toward its ideal of fellowship and training for Christian men. Theta has made itself felt in Christian work both in and outside of the College, because the men are keenly alive and up-to-date. They gather with the purpose of improving themselves, of preparing for better work. And this opportunity they get through the expert criticism and help of Professor Hutchins—a rare privilege in itself.

Outside of the College, Theta men have organized and now conduct Sunday Schools and churches, Bible classes and work for boys, in the various smaller towns around Oberlin. The men from Theta also play a prominent part in the work of the Gospel Teams. Nor is it a miracle that Theta has come to have such an important place in the Christian work of the College, for “by their fruits ye shall know them.”—HERBERT C. MAYER.

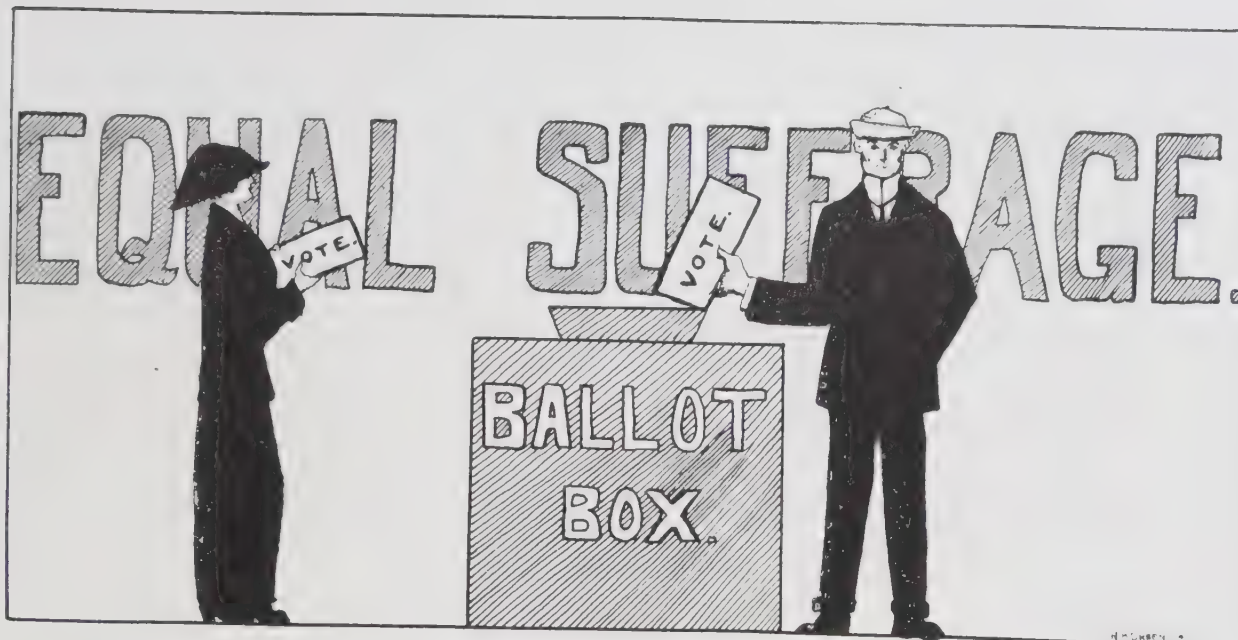

The Scribblers' Club

One rainy November night in 1912, six humble aspirants met in a secluded niche in the library to read their first offerings at the shrine of Literature. They had scarcely begun the ritual when the lights in the Library suddenly went out, and black darkness enveloped the devout Scribblers. Consternation reigned for a moment, but it was soon dispelled. "'Tis a good omen," quoth the Oracle. "No need have we for artificial light, for the organization will emanate its own radiance."

From this seed planted in darkness, the Scribblers' Club has grown to be a living organism in the activities of the college. The Club meets once a fortnight, with Professor Jeliffe as Guiding Spirit; the meetings are delightfully informal, as each member reads in turn his own original literary production. Then the other members criticize, commend, and suggest, so that the writer gets the point of view of others, and learns where his work may be improved.

To the benefit accruing from the opportunities for self-expression in artistic terms is added the delight of a fellowship based on a ground of mutual interest. Nor is the social element lost sight of, for several occasions have been recorded in which the chief sustenance was not purely intellectual, but came in the form of fruit salad, wafers and coffee. In this phase the Scribblers' Club is not unlike the Coffee-house of the Seventeenth century where the wits and writers of the day gathered over a cup of ale to exchange parries of wit and wisdom.—FRANCES C. JEFFERY.

The policy of the Equal Suffrage League has been somewhat different this year than in the past. Instead of the regular speakers throughout the winter, the energies of the League have been conserved for a more continuous effort in the spring. The work of last spring began with the opening of the campaign by the State League. It was carried on by means of outside speakers, open meetings, and frequent bulletins concerning the suffrage movement in all parts of the world. As in former years, large emphasis has been laid this year on increasing the membership. In spite of the large number of Senior members who graduated in the spring, the number now on the membership roll is gratifying and shows clearly the place Oberlin students have taken in this movement, which is rapidly becoming universal.

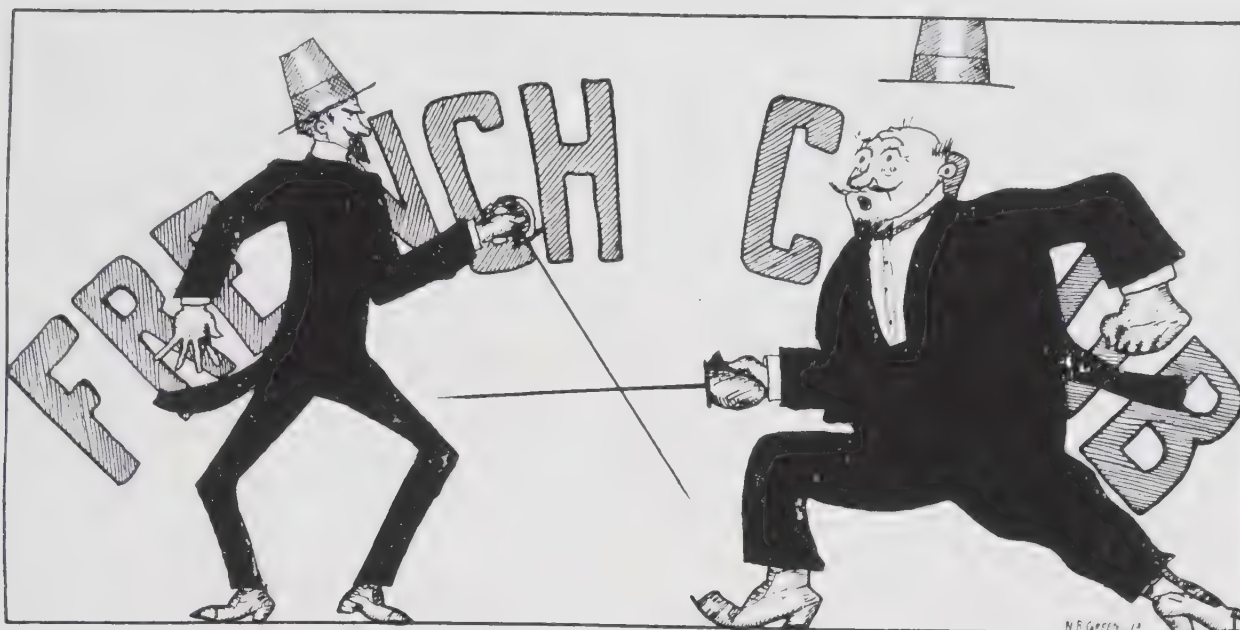

In general, altho the year started with an apparent reaction toward indifference, the League now shows signs of reawakened interest. For in these days of the widening of the suffrage borders and the acknowledgment in both the east and the west, thoughtful consideration of the problem has been forced upon all.

This year marks probably the most efficient organization which the German Club has reached. Two new features have proven a distinct gain; (1) restricting membership to students of excellent scholarship; (2) the establishment of yearly dues.

The meetings have been devoted to conversation in groups, under the guidance of the leaders, the hour closing with a recitation, vocal solo, a chorus singing. Occasionally the hour has been turned into a social occasion, or there has been a program.

Under the able leadership of the music committee the fall term closed with a very charming Lieder-Abend. We are most fortunate in being able to secure for such occasions the services of students under the training of our own professors of vocal music. Indeed this year has opened up a most attractive vista throwing light on one line of possible development for our Club in the future. It has made one realize anew that Oberlin offers opportunities quite unique among American colleges for study in Germany's own language of one of the most marked of Germany's developments—its music.—PROFESSOR ARLETTA M. ABBOTT.

An abundance of action, humor which is universal and which appears through the action rather than through the dialogue, situation after situation each more humorous than the last—these are the characteristics of the two short farce-comedies presented by the French Club this year. Both are almost classic on the French stage, both hold up to ridicule stock comedy types,—the would-be-learned country squire, the officious country hanger-on, the pompous police official. In brief, the Club has made a serious effort to present something both worth while and amusing.

The work of the sketch class, extending over a period of six months, is planned primarily to stimulate the student's appreciation of the art of picture making. The class is in session every Monday evening from six-thirty to eight-thirty. Students are permitted to come and to leave at any time during the session. The instructor invites any one interested to meet with the regular art students, feeling assured that he will profit greatly by so doing.

During the earlier part of the season, members take turns posing for brief periods, from five to fifteen or twenty minutes. The purpose of these brief poses is to train the student to grasp quickly and accurately the essentials of the pose. At all times criticism is individual, the instructor taking pains to point out the relation of the work in hand to a completed work of art. It is evident therefore that the student is not embarrassed by his or her lack of artistic ability, being rather absorbed in a more comprehensive view of the work. All through the season the student has problems similar to those confronting the mature artist, the instructor, by class or individual criticism, explaining the essential points.

After a time the student devotes an entire evening to a single pose, models being hired for this work. The last month of the season the student works from groups of figures and accessories, treating the subject in an illustrative manner. At this time practical composition is discussed at length, references being made to old masters and modern.

The very nature of a college newspaper binds it in a peculiar way to all the interests of the college. The whole range of college activities and influence is its field. This interest is athletic. Its busy reporters extract from the managers, coaches, and captains of the athletic teams all the facts and figures and prophecies which they will yield up in advance of the games, and then in a dingy second story den on West College street these same news mongers weave the story which is calculated to swell the crowd and increase the spirit when the game takes place. Then back to his ill-lighted haunts, a dash of ink or a click of the typewriter, and the story is ready for a thousand readers.

This interest is literary. The same "before and after" treatment is accorded to the inter-society and inter-collegiate debates, to the oratorical contests, to the many academic and the special departmental lectures, and to all the extra-literary interests of the college.

This interest is artistic and moral. Art exhibitions and lectures, artist recitals, glee-club trips and concerts, Christmas and Spring musical festivals receive the same pre-post notices as do athletic contests and literary events. Special religious exercises such as Thanksgiving and the Day of Prayer, the Christian Association addresses, and important chapel talks are reported with a fullness accorded to their importance.

This interest is to assist in forming opinions. The editors have aimed this year at conserving the best interests of the college. They have aimed at defending traditions and customs, else at reforming them; they have tried to discuss men and measures in the light of broad principles; they have tried to anticipate the general student consciousness upon important questions; they have desired to focus deepest interest upon the "main chance"—the chance to improve the mind "with a store of permanent and valuable interests;" they have opened their columns to differing views; and in a new feature this year have kept up a little running commentary upon current student life.

For some of us work of this kind is almost as precious as first love. We crave it, first lose, and then find ourselves in it.

In previous years the Oberlin Monthly has been alluded to as the Infant. But infants have a habit of growing, and as the Monthly is no exception, it has now become a lusty boy. Of course it has suffered with the maladies common to childhood, but it has pulled through a little the better for its suffering. The fact that it has had to force a way for itself this year, on the new semi-independent basis, has given it a new energy rather than sapped its strength. Never before in its brief career has there been so much interest shown, and out of this increased interest has come its physical and spiritual growth. It has been a critical year, but the Monthly has justified its existence, and it will only be a matter of years and continued progress before it can take its rank with the foremost college monthlies.

Some people still wonder why the Monthly should put forth such literary efforts, when everyone has access to the great periodicals of the day, and need not turn to amateur publications for reading matter. It is not however to furnish good literature to the reading public that the Monthly came into being, though this is no mean aim. It is rather to give opportunity for self-expression, which is one of the rarest and noblest gifts of the mind. Even if one cannot write poetry like Milton's, one can at least know the supreme joy in writing verse, be it ever so humble. Only those who have tried can know such satisfaction and it is in giving opportunity for the play of self-expression, aside from the stilted work of class themes that the Oberlin Monthly justifies its existence.—FRANCES C. JEFFERY.

Oratory

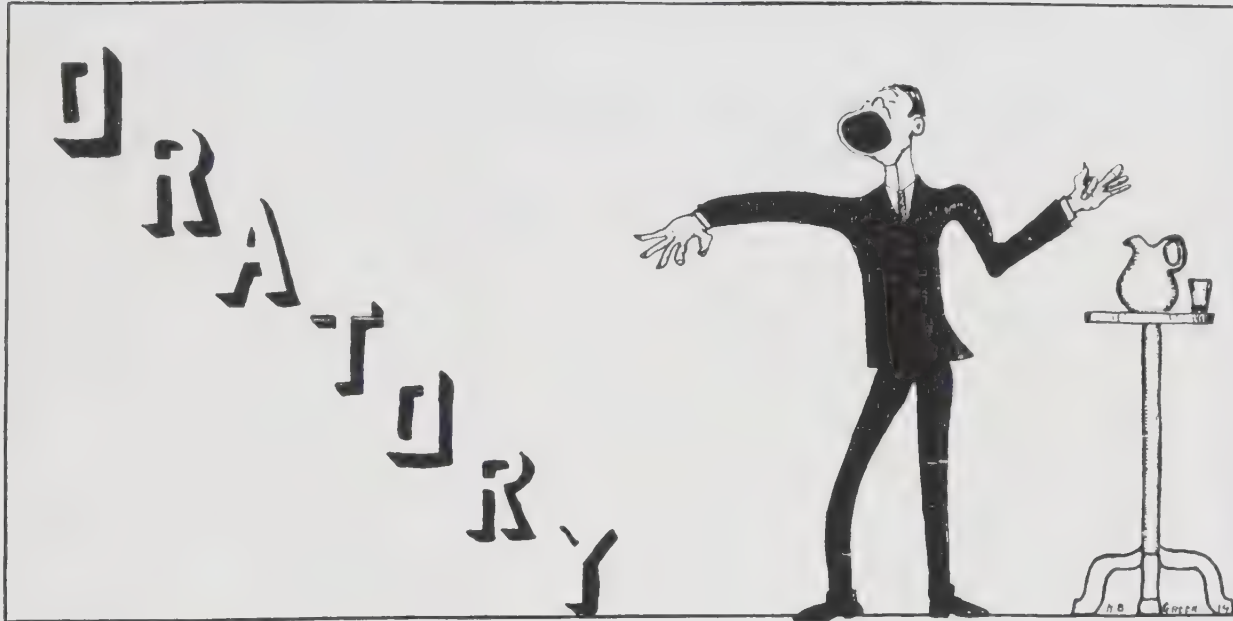

The college oration is a piece of composition which has an audience; so often composition work is written by those who do not want to write for those who do not want to read. And an oration has a definite literary problem which the man may appreciate and on which he may work earnestly.

The Oberlin interest in public speaking has been in the main in debating, and the effect on writing and delivery has not been for the best. More careful work in oratory would be a decided help to our college speakers. The debate gives little opportunity for finished writing or for impassioned speaking.

There are signs of an awakening interest in the problem of the oration among the students. The contest of the Northern Oratorical League to be held in Oberlin this spring will be an interesting and inspiring event. There are no speakers in Oberlin of the impassioned type. The Northern Oratorical League will give Oberlin students a good opportunity to appreciate other styles of presentation and a more fiery delivery than they often hear.

College oratory in Oberlin has done something for the men; the society orations are on the whole very good for such organizations. But it can and will amount to much more. A longer and more careful preparation and a better tradition are to be the result of the new impetus, and the faithful work of the Department.

Glee Club

The tour of the Oberlin College Glee Club, though it approached dangerously near to the private hunting grounds of the North Pole, was one continuous round of warm receptions. The first three concerts reminded the fellows of the trials and tribulations of an actor's life—making trains in stage costumes and philosophizing in hotel lobbies. When at midnight on Dec. 20, after a desperate ride in a street car, the lights of the "Magnet" beamed through the darkness of a Chicago freight yard upon the tired songsters, the domestic joys and troubles of the tour commenced.

After a quiet Sunday spent in Ft. Atkinson, Wis., the Club came to Waukesha. Here the alumni association, consisting of Percy Ebbott, Paul Ferris, and Ted Harvey treated the club to a trip through the town. The White Rock Springs, the Mud Baths, and the Kenyon Portable House Factory were visited. Waukesha was thought to be largely a town of graft, making a million a year out of bottled well water and the superior qualities of its back-yard mud.

On the night of Jan. 1 the club had the unexpected pleasure of singing to an aristocratic company in an adjoining car. One of the ladies in the car in turn volunteered a number of songs which were exquisitely done. She proved to be Miss Wirthlin who was to be at Oberlin with the Thomas Orchestra in the spring. The remaining concerts of the tour were uneventful. The concert at Riverside, Chicago, given after a strenuous day of shopping and light opera, closed the series.

The life on the car was unusually intellectual this year. Alderfer and Jimmie Hall with their French, Bill Martin with his Shakespeare and Herb Haas and Harvey with their wit left little to call for in the way of conversation. Space is lacking for a proper expatiation on the chef's wonderful meals, which made spoiled epicures of all the fellows; of the receptions, dances, and jolly good pranks; of Bill Martin's sad case of "le grand passion"; of Watty's trouble with his suit case and early morning mails.

The old saying that "no prophet is welcome in his fatherland" could possibly apply to glee clubs as well, though they claim no powers of prophecy. The Home Concert, coming as it did after the humiliations of examination week was as usual a rather trying affair for them. About half the program was learned after their return from the winter trip.

At any rate, the members of the club could look with satisfaction and anticipation toward the promised pleasures of the spring trip which was to carry them to the Atlantic seaboard, to New York and Boston.—T. O. WEDEL.

The Musical Union entered upon its fifty-third session in September, 1912. During these years one hundred and sixty-six public programs have been presented. Prominent orchestras with great conductors, and celebrated soloists have assisted the Union, with its able directors, in rendering the choral works of the masters. Founded at a time when choral music was new in the middle west; this organization has been a leader in developing an appreciation for the best, by producing those works which have stood the test of time. And now, after more than half a century of existence, it continues to maintain its high standards, and ranks among the foremost choral societies of this country.

The programs for this season include two of the masterpieces in oratorio,—Handel's "Messiah," and Mendelssohn's "Elijah," together with selections from the works of Richard Wagner, given in honor of the centenary of his birth. Owing to the lack of an organ in Finney Chapel, the "Messiah" concert in December was given in the First Church.

A distinct advance has been made in the organization itself this year. Members are no longer excused from attendance at rehearsals for any cause except continued illness. The consequent regularity of attendance has made possible a mastery of the score by the individual members to a degree not before attained. The provision through which certain advanced students may secure honor membership by passing a second special examination has also contributed definitely to the esprit-de-corps of the organization. It is perhaps unfortunate that more undergraduates do not take advantage of this opportunity for choral training; one might well say that few extra-curriculum activities give greater returns for the time and energy spent.—PROFESSOR EARL F. ADAMS.

Senior Play

For the first time in the history of the "Senior Play," two performances were given, by the class of 1912. Elaborate plans for an out-door production were thwarted on both evenings by rain; and the play necessarily suffered somewhat by the hasty transfer to Finney Chapel. Though the audience made generous allowance for the exigencies of the situation, the disappointment was keen to the cast, which had worked so faithfully, and to the Committee, which had executed all the details for an elaborate staging among the trees of the Campus.

Perhaps no play of Shakespeare has such varied interest. It would be hard to find a spectator who could not feel the charm of Titania and Puck, with their bands of fairies, or the dignity of Theseus, or the passion of Demetrius and Lysander, or the nonsense of Bottom and his crew. Love scenes are a proverbial stumbling block in college dramatics, and it is no meager praise to say that the two pairs of lovers carried their parts with dignity and effect. The elfish dancing of Miss Mildred Metcalf, as Puck, will not soon be forgotten. Miss Hull, as Titania, combined admirably the dignity and lightness of a fairy queen; while Mr. MacCollin, as Bottom, and Mr. Scott, as Flute, received deserved applause.

In spite of the cramped stage, the chorus of fairies gave their dances admirably; and when the Fairy Queen sank to sleep on her bower, in the subdued light, with the attendant fairies flitting before her, under the spell of Mendelssohn's music, the walls of the Chapel vanished and one felt indeed transported to the land of summer dreams.

To the Conservatory Orchestra and its Director, Dr. Andrews, to the Committee of the Class and its able Chairman, Mr. Russell Clark, to the fairy chorus and to those who trained them, credit and thanks are due.—LOUIS E. LORD.

Junior Play

The Junior Play has made itself one of the accepted institutions of the college. Starting as a pleasurable adjunct to the Thanksgiving festivities of the Junior year it grew in requirements and expectations until more careful preparation and staging was demanded than could reasonably be furnished for so limited an audience. Consequently the Thanksgiving Day performance was omitted, and attention was directed to a somewhat more ambitious presentation open to the college as a whole. As a normal result, the play has taken a place in college dramatics second in importance only to the commencement production of senior year.

In accordance with this tradition the class of 1914 undertook Sheridan's "The School for Scandal." And if we may judge by the appreciative acceptance accorded its presentation, we may feel that the play proved to be a satisfactory medium for the histrionic abilities of those who won places in the cast. The endeavor throughout was to place the emphasis upon the action and the characters of the play rather than upon the setting; for it was believed that the audience would find more pleasure in the situations than in the mounting, however accurately that might be represented. Considerations of expense, moreover, had some weight in this determination. At the same time it ought to be said that the natural resources of Warner Hall were more effectively utilized under the capable management of Mr. Hickok, than had ever been the case before. The result was a great improvement over the precarious insufficiency of unstable screens; while the illusion of reality was more nearly attained by suggestive settings than could have been the case by any attempt at archeological accuracy.

The actors responded to this environment giving a well-balanced and thoroughly entertaining performance. A generous audience, moreover, inspired them to act better than they ever had before. If Joseph's "insidious" arguments were occasionally amended by their spokesman; if Sir Peter's shoe-buckle, slipping from its proper place threatened to be trampled under foot in his zoological peregrinations; if Charles' reformation was accompanied by a proprietary seizure of an exceedingly demure hand—at least the friendly audience were pleased to applaud.

In their commendation the primary intention of the performance was attained. And the unselfish devotion of cast and committee, the harmonious spirit of collaboration exhibited, no less than the familiarity secured with a masterpiece of drama, would seem to warrant the expenditure of time and energy involved. The class of 1914 should look back without apologetic misgivings to its Junior Play.—R. A. JELIFFE.

The New Athletic Field

Our hopes and plans for properly constructed and adequate athletic facilities are at last beginning to materialize. A start has already been made which we hope will some day give Oberlin a complete and modern athletic plant on such a scale that every man in the institution will have an opportunity for recreation in the open. While the construction of the entire plant is not considered possible at this time, owing to the lack of funds, every piece of work done is to be a part of one great comprehensive plan. That Olmsted Brothers of Boston and Cass Gilbert of New York have been retained by the College to collaborate in planning this work, is sufficient guarantee that we are to have only the best in both utility and in attractiveness. Because of the unsafe condition of the bleachers at Dill Field, we are forced to make our beginning upon a new Varsity football field. This will be constructed a little to the east of the present field which will bring it about on the axis of Woodland Avenue extended. Around the playing field a quarter mile cinder track will be built and this enclosure will be flanked by modest concrete grandstands.

The Varsity baseball field will eventually be moved to the space which has been used by the Academy as a practice field. This will bring it close to and just northwest of the new track and football field.

But more important than these features are the plans which provide for three additional football fields for practice, three practice baseball diamonds, batting cages, jumping and vaulting pits and twenty to twenty-five tennis courts. Eventually facilities will be provided which will make it possible for every man so inclined to find a chance for exercise. Several new games will naturally come into vogue and every effort will be made to induce the non-athletic men to participate in some sport in which he may find both pleasure and good health.

The entire acreage must, of course, sometime be enclosed by a durable and attractive fence or wall. At the end of Woodland Avenue a fine gateway with ticket offices and turnstiles is planned while at the southeast corner of the grounds on Union Street is located a road gate for carriages and automobiles. It will undoubtedly be possible to provide commodious and comfortable dressing rooms and training quarters for all teams under one of the concrete stands.

A complete drainage system is already being installed which is to cost about $7500.00. While this seems a large amount to spend under the ground, the condition of our soil and subsoil is such that adequate drainage must be secured at any cost. Thorough and first class construction will be specified from start to finish and when completed, Oberlin men will have facilities for health and exercise under conditions approaching the ideal.—C. W. SAVAGE.

Review of the Season

Of the 1911 championship team, those to report the first day of practice were Captain Stimson, Fisher, Haas, Pyle, Young, Theller, Kirshner and Derr. Martin and Henderson of the 1910 champions were again in suits. With Leonard and Gray expected out soon and the presence of most of the likely men from last year's freshmen and substitutes, the season started with a rush. Heidelberg gave very little opposition but was as strong as last year and showed the Oberlin team to be much better than at the same time the season before. The next week was a very busy one in preparation for the Cornell trip. The journey to Ithaca was as usual a very enjoyable one although Henderson paid for more than he brought home with him. Tommy saw a side of Cornell student life that set him to thinking that Pyle was not such a "rascal" after all.

The game was very much in contrast to the one of a year ago. Ten minute quarters were offered before they were requested. The Cornell team played a very clean and sportsmanlike game and did not rough it even when scored upon. Our light line composed of Pyle, Theller, Leonard, Neill, Hubbard, Estabrook and Young stopped the advances of the heavy Cornell team while the backfield composed of Henderson, Fisher, Stimson, and Haas was able to gain rather consistently on the end runs, forward passes and occasionally a buck through the line.

The game this year lacked the many amusing incidents that occurred last year but was enjoyed much more by Oberlin players and enthusiasts. Old "Mac" combined a number of dances and gymnastic stunts when Oberlin scored although he was supposed to be holding one end of the yard stick at the time. It was a happy crowd that left Percy field and even the cold plunge in the hotel sample room did not dampen their spirits for, reinforced by "Mac" and "Ote," they gave a spirited concert which was highly enjoyed by the large crowd at the depot.

The game with Wittenberg was expected to be a hard one as it was reported to have an exceptionally strong team. The game showed a powerful offense but the defense was not as strong and was further weakened by an injury to Hubbard which kept him out for the remainder of the season.

With Martin still out of the game, Kirshner in the hospital with typhoid fever and Hubbard laid up, the contest with Wesleyan on the following Saturday looked anything but an easy victory for Oberlin. Wesleyan was in as weak a condition as our team and could not stop the advance of our back field. Neither could they gain ground consistently and a slip in the judgment of the referee gave them their only chance to score, after a stubborn defense by Oberlin and a close decision by the officials. This touchdown somewhat irritated the Oberlin men and they began to walk through Wesleyan at every play until a total of forty-eight points were registered against them.

As in 1911, Oberlin students and townspeople were looking forward to the Reserve game in Cleveland on the twenty-sixth of October. Everyone seemed confident of winning and even the papers took a hand at guessing the final score, with Reserve in each case at the small end. The papers said that Oberlin was told to take things easy and whether they were told or not, there was no attempt to run up a big score, and so the final was the same as at the end of the first half, twenty-eight to nothing. The Wooster game the next Saturday threw a great scare into the Oberlin following, for Wooster played a strong game and surprised the home team with a variety of forward passes which were very skillfully executed. It was not until the score stood 27 to 6 that the rooters were able to rest at ease. Wooster seems to be a sort of hoo-doo for Oberlin when it comes to playing foot-ball against them. Perhaps they are too good natured.

The season thus far had been the best in the history of the College and there remained two games which if won would place Oberlin again at the head of the Ohio Conference. With the State game ahead, the week between November 7th and 9th was a busy one for the line men in order to get them in shape to meet the heavy State line. With our line holding its own we were confident of victory.

That 17-point finish in five minutes will live long in the memories of both Oberlin and State followers. It did more possibly to bring glory to Oberlin and her team than if the game had been won. The work of the powerful line won the game and the championship of Ohio for State. She has reason to be proud of her victory; but is Oberlin not more fortunate to be represented by men who can take defeat like true sportsmen, men who are clean, unselfish and loyal, who give their best for Oberlin? Such are the men that fought for Oberlin and the students showed that they appreciated them by collecting a large crowd and meeting the team as it returned to Oberlin. That same spirit and backing given the team that night and during the week following had a large part in defeating Case in the last game of the season.

Basket Ball 1913

Owing to the presence in Oberlin of most of the basket ball squad, practice was carried on during the Christmas vacation so that we were in fair shape for the first game with Heidleberg two days after school opened. The journey to and from Wooster the following Saturday was more interesting and fully as tiring as the game itself. Hope of reaching Wooster that evening had left when a little help, along the line of electricity, arrived and we reached our destination in time to beat Wooster in the first game played in their new gymnasium.

On Jan. 18, Allegheny was defeated by two points. The Ohio State game at Columbus the following Wednesday was very unsatisfactory. Both teams played poor ball. A different ruling on "out of bounds" handicapped our men. Pete was sick from a jar on the chin and the rest of the men seemed to be off color. Paske came within one of throwing as many baskets during the ten minutes he was in as the rest of the team put together. On the whole, both teams probably played about the poorest game of their season.

After examinations were over new life seemed to have taken hold of the team although Wooster came close to beating it out of the men. Only a sensational and whirlwind finish made the game look easy. The Wooster game proved the last for Theller as he could not express his ideas in French. "Dutch" played his best game and his all-round playing was a big factor in the winning of the game.

The Reserve game on February 12 was an easy one but Varsity was also playing the best game of the season up to that time. On the eastern trip Oberlin played three of the best or possibly the three best teams in the east. At Ithaca, Cornell, Eastern league champion, had to play her best game of the season and was lucky to win 44 to 39. At Syracuse Oberlin led by one point at the end of the first half but the strain of the preceding game told in the last half and Syracuse won 35 to 27. The old Hoodoo at Rochester seemed to have left and they won 12 to 10 but they can place the credit of victory on other things than good playing.

Although the team brought back no victories, they did bring back a various assortment of hats, ties, collars, men's furnishings in general, music, other articles of personal interest and the cannon ball. So Oberlin lost three games, yet the boys had a good time and upheld their good reputation in the east.

The next week was spent in resting, with but light practice, for the O. S. U. game. Oberlin clearly out-played State and won 24 to 18. Although several fouls were called on each team there were none resulting from personal fouling. O. S. U. took the lead at the start and the score stood 6 to 1 early in the first half but Oberlin gained the lead before that half ended and held it throughout the rest of the game. Fritz played well for State but it is impossible to pick any particular man as playing the star game for Oberlin. They played as a team and the same general team-work was characteristic of the game with Wesleyan the following week. In the game Varsity played her best home game of the season and O. W. U. was as clearly out-played as Oberlin was at Delaware and even more so. The score was 32 to 18.

Track Season of 1912

We began our season by an indoor meet with Wesleyan at Delaware. The fellows fought hard all the way in each event and certainly made the Wesleyan team hustle for every point. Although beaten by the score of 55 to 38, we found consolation in the test of our material and the experience gained by our new men.

The interclass meet finished the indoor track work. The meet was very exciting, as the winners could not be declared until after the relay race. The Seniors and Freshmen were neck and neck, even up to the last lap of the relay, but the Freshmen finally won out by a narrow margin.

Our next fracas was with Ohio State at Columbus on April 27th, and the lack of good weather conditions, together with the absence of any star men, gave us little hope of accomplishing much. However, we surprised State by our consistent work and made them "hump" to beat us by the score of 65 to 51. The work of Herring and Tucker in this meet was very commendable.

The Home meet on May 3d, proved that interest in track work is on the ascendancy in Oberlin. More men competed than has been the case formerly and the quality of the performances was on a higher plane. Harvey '14, won the individual honors with 17 points, while Forbes '15, lived up to his reputation by turning off the hundred yard dash in 10 seconds flat. The Seniors won the meet with 59 points and carried off the beautiful cup presented by Welsh and Crombie.

On May 11th, we came into our own and by all around consistent work, submerged Reserve by the score of 81 to 36. Every man had a hand in it, but Harvey, Metcalf, and Shedd were our heavy point winners.

Finally we came to the "Big 6" with high hopes based on our past showing, for we figured out that we could place second and possibly carry off first honors as we did in 1910. But figures went as they sometimes do, and after the meet was over, we found ourselves in third place, led by Ohio State and Wesleyan. While the result was disappointing we are proud to remember that every man did his best. Metcalf, running contrary to expectations succeeded in clipping two fifths of a second from the mile record; and by hard work, placed second in the two mile a half lap behind the winner. Harvey, Shedd, and Miller should also be mentioned for their work.

Oberlin sent Metcalf and Harvey to the Western Conference meet held at Champagne, Ill. "Nellie" ran a wonderful two mile race, winning in the record-breaking time of nine minutes, forty-two and four-fifths seconds. This time now stands as the Oberlin and also Western Conference record. Although Harvey cleared the bar at five feet ten inches, he was unable to place.

Baseball, 1912

The Oberlin team of 1912 was as good a bunch of ball players as has represented the school in my remembrance. No, we did not win the championship, but as we look back over the season now, that seems of only minor importance. We all did our best and had a good time doing it. Our loss of the Wesleyan game left the championship in a muddle, otherwise we would have had a clear claim to it.

At the beginning of the season there was an abundance of material and everyone was given as thorough a tryout as possible, in the short time we had. Practically every man was given a chance in the first game with Baldwin University, which was won easily by the consistent hitting of our men. It was this hitting ability which distinguished the 1912 team from other Oberlin nines of recent years.

The first Conference game was lost to Case, at Cleveland, 5-3. A couple of costly errors at critical stages of the game were responsible for most of Case's runs. Reserve was vanquished at Cleveland the next day in a nerve-racking contest. Up to the final round, Reserve was in the lead but in the first of the ninth, we managed to slip two runs across, by consecutive hitting and material assistance from 3rd baseman Knight, tying the score at 5-5. With two out in the tenth, Capt. Pyle proved to be the man of the hour, and poled a two sacker into deep center; it was up to "Herby" Haas. He connected for a clean single into left. It was a heart-breaking finish with all the thrills. Brady who replaced Wasson at this stage, disposed of the next three batters in quick order.

The following Saturday, Reserve was again walloped; this time, to the tune of 5-0. It was a pitchers' battle from start to finish, with Bradley having decidedly the better of it. Thursday of the next week, Ohio State was subdued in a hard fought game. Richmond who took the mound for the visitors didn't last long, as the bombardment of drives which greeted him was something terrific; four runs were scored before he was derricked. State overcame this lead later in the game, but victory was finally nosed out in the last of the eighth, the game ending with Oberlin on the long end of a 7-6 score.

Our return game with Case, resulted in a 2-1 victory for Varsity. Bradley's pitching was air-tight, and he was supported in big league style. The final swing around the southern circuit, via the Green Line, resulted in an overwhelming defeat for Wooster. By hard, clean, hitting five runs were put across before the first pitcher was pulled. Haas greeted Blaser with a stinging single into left, and this was followed by a regular fusillade of hits. Putnam who next took up the task, fared little better but managed to finish the game. This was the big slug-fest of the season.

The following Saturday, Wooster evened the series and tied up the championship by getting the decision in a hard fought game. The visitors made all of their runs in the first inning. After the opening round, "Sam" Wasson pitched masterful ball. Oberlin fought hard, but Blaser was strong in the pinches. The final result was 4-3.

The closing game of the Conference schedule, was played with Wesleyan the following Saturday. The boys got away to a bad start and the Methodists had amassed a total of seven runs before the team began to play. In the closing innings, by clean and consistent hitting, five runs were scored, but the lead was too great.

The season closed with the annual Alumni game, and it proved to be a thriller; the teams battled for thirteen innings before a decision could be reached; the boys finally took pity on the old men and handed them the game in the last of the thirteenth.

The season of 1912, was a success from every stand-point; we won our share of victories, the spirit was fine, the attendance at the games was better than for many years. Capt. Pyle proved an ideal man in that position, and had the hearty support and co-operation of every man on the team. With eight men of this year's varsity back, Captain-elect "Hans" Colmery will undoubtedly lead one of the strongest aggregations which has ever represented the school. Here's to "Hans" and the season of 1913.

DICKINSON HOUSE

To maintain an organization, affording opportunity for the physical exercise of all the women in Oberlin College, Conservatory, and Academy, must, of necessity, be no light undertaking. Such an organization is the Gymnasium and Field Association; and such an undertaking is the task of the board.

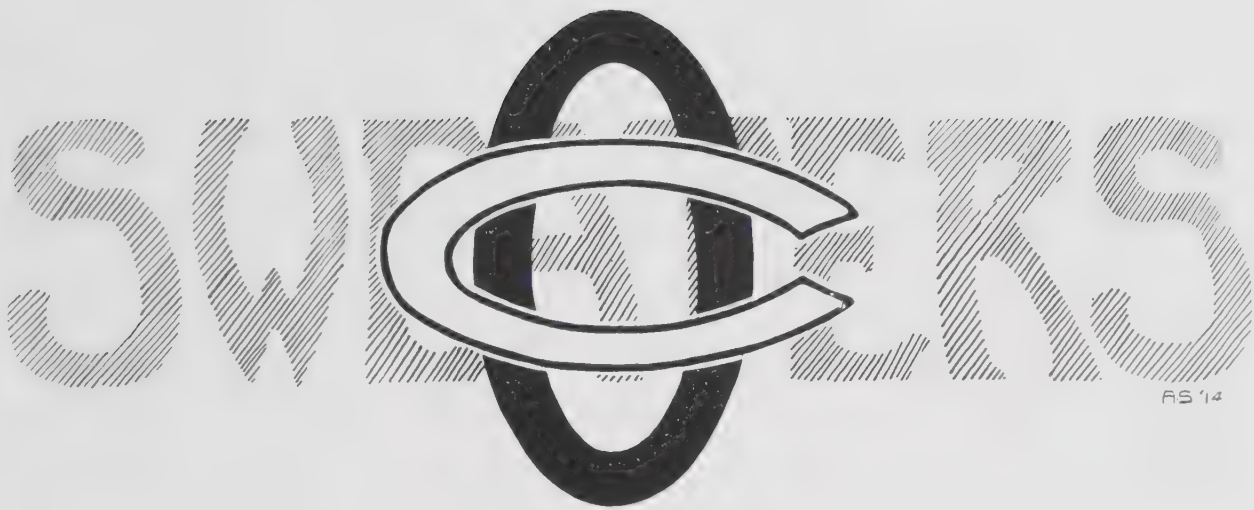

The past year has enrolled four hundred and fifty women as association members. Such membership entitles the holder to all privileges of the organization, use of the association tennis courts, hockey field, basket ball floor, entrance into the tournaments in these sports and into the skating contest, attendance at the regular G. F. A. dances and lastly the use of the Dickinson House. Besides the attempt has been made to furnish tennis and hockey instruction to all members so desiring, and, with our new plans for next year, we have every right to expect that this department will become entirely efficient. Association numerals, sweaters and tennis skirts are awarded to members whose proficiency in special sports fulfills certain requirements.

By next year Dickinson House is to be renovated, and every effort is to be put forth by the board, to make it vitally beneficial to the organization. The need of such a rendezvous is glaringly apparent; if the members will but take advantage of the opportunities our association house affords, the need will be met.

The "O C" Sweaters

At last, after several unsuccessful attempts, the Gymnasium and Field Association has succeeded in getting a reward for the athletic girls in Oberlin College, which is surely worth working for. It is a "good looking" white Varsity sweater with the "O C" monogram in crimson and gold.

Few of the girls realize just how these sweaters are attained. The requirements are:

1. Those holding basket ball numerals for four years.
2. Numerals for three different sports.
3. For Gymnasium and two sports.
4. Two numerals in one sport and numerals in another sport.
5. Two numerals in one sport and numerals in gymnasium.

If the girls would begin in their Freshman year to think about working for a sweater, more would be the proud possessors of them by the time they were Seniors.

Those who have succeeded in winning the sweaters since the new constitution came out in 1911 containing the new regulations for the awarding of honors, are as follows:

Marjorie Hull, 1912, for two numerals in Basket Ball, one in skating.

Sarah Jones, 1914, for one numeral in skating, one in tennis, and one in Basket Ball.

Lenore Davidson, 1914, for one numeral in skating, two in Basket Ball.

Ruth Smith, 1914, for one numeral in skating, two in Basket Ball.

Alice Standish, 1914, for one numeral in skating, one in tennis, and one in Basket Ball.

Ruth Anderegg, 1913, for four numerals in Basket Ball.

Mae H. Breckenridge, 1913, for four numerals in Basket Ball.—CATHARINE PAINE.

Samantha at the "Carnival of the Nations"

When Will Tompkin's gal Sarah, who goes to Oberlin to school, wrote her folks that they was goin' to have a Carnival of the Nashuns there last spring, an idee come to me. The idee stuck and it was this. Namely, that Josiah Allen and I should make a tower to that institootion of eddication and coeddication and view the convocation of the nashuns. So I ses to Josiah "'Tis our dooty as wishers for peace and hominy among the nashuns, to attend and give our countenance to this celebration." I had a week to convince Josiah in, and I was calm and steddly and he come to see it my way. So we went to promote the cause of peace, he in his Sunday broadcloth and me in my new alpacky.

When we was settin' on some of those boards arrayed in tears, with the youth and brightness of our nashun and the day arrayed before us, we was glad we had took the tower. Inwardly I swelled with pride as I noted how my sect outnumbered Josiah's in bein' represented. Anon and anon, the peace-pipe began to be smoked by the light fantastic toe of the nashuns, as it were. One nashun arter another come out on the field and cavorted graceful and amiable in the dances of their mother country. They'd all brought their clothes with 'em from their native heath, and some was more gorgeous than the crazy quilt I made of Josiah's old neckties. Some of the dances was slow and stately, and some was real chirky, depended on whether the nashun was one that's in a hurry or not, but all was pretty and real good exercise. To end it all up, they took off all their furrin togs and dressed up like civilised Americans. Then they wound themselves in and out round a May-pole, and a sightlier lot of gals I ain't seen in a long time, nor Josiah neither. It gave me great hope for the furriner.

As I was eppisodin' to Josiah, tellin' him how my spirit was wrought with the hope for universal peace, up come Sarah Tompkins from the field. After I'd greeted her cordial, and told her how her pa'd lost his young heifer, I went on, growin' more eloquent. "If all the nashuns," ses I, "can wind 'emselves around that Maypole there in frolic, how soon may they not wind 'emselves together round the pole of civilisation"—Here Sarah interrupted me and ses, "Oh, aunt Samantha, they wasn't real furriners, just us girls dressed up." I was took back a bit, but I rallied noble and ses, "The truth of my sentiments remains unrepai'd. And all the better, if the young women of this nashun can represent the spirit of all the nashuns, there's no predictin' how soon they may rise like a mighty sun and drive away the clouds and darkness of dissention." Then I give Sarah the plum preserves her ma'd sent her.—HELEN SWIFT.

Tennis

A review of the 1911-1912 girls tennis season reveals some very interesting and successful games and matches. Preliminaries began just as soon as arrangements could be made in the fall and in spite of the usual bad weather, they were completed before cold weather set in. Owing to the extremely early arrival of spring followed by a month or more of winter weather again, the spring tennis season was delayed until quite late. However, no time was lost when it did begin, and great enthusiasm and interest was shown until its close, June 7th.

As a result of the Freshman preliminaries, Helen Harvey received first honors; of the Sophomore, Alice Standish; of the Junior, Helen Smails; of the Senior, Adele Brown. In accordance with the rules for championship tournament, Helen Harvey and Alice Standish played off to determine underclass championship and Helen Smails and Adele Brown played off for upper class championship with the result in favor of Alice Standish and Helen Smails respectively. The final play off between these two, held May 28, 1912, awarded the honor of college champion to Helen Smails who won two out of three sets.

Conclusive as this may seem, there is yet to take into consideration the Conservatory, from which Olive Willey was the champion representative in the tournament. She and Helen Smails, on June 7th played off the finals before a most exciting and enthusiastic crowd of spectators and the result terminated in a victory for Olive Willey, who was presented with a cup. To defend her title of the previous years, Grace Waite played off with Olive Willey, and again successfully defended it.

It is needless to remark on the interest shown in the game last year. It can best be judged by the addition of one more new court back of the Dickinson house, by the difficulty people had in trying to get hold of courts to play on, and by the crowd of spectators, which could be seen around the courts where the games were being played.

Basketball

The girls' basket ball championship for 1913 belongs to the Sophomores who achieved the title of champions only after a hard fought season. At the end of the regular six-game schedule, the Seniors and the Sophomores were tied for first place; each team had lost two games. The tie necessitated the playing of an extra game between the two teams and by a score of 17-16 the Sophomores won this game, which was the best played of the entire series.

The four class teams were evenly matched and each equally feared by the others. The Seniors have long played together and seemed to be best in their accurate shooting. The Juniors with an ever changing team finished much better than they began, and closed the season by defeating the champion Sophomores in an over-time game. The Sophomores had the best team work of the four, playing well together and passing accurately. The Freshman team shows several good players who give promise of a strong team for next year. Not one of the games between any of the teams was easy for the winner.

From the standpoint of the players and officials, the season has proved successful. The scores were larger than before; "time out" was used sparingly, and the spirit keen but friendly. The players seem to have improved their ideas of team-work and of passing while the officials have tried to be impartial and fearless in presiding over games. One thing that has been a drawback has been the increasing amount of rough play. The teams have not been equally guilty of this but the prevalence of shady tactics has been noticeable. Nevertheless, all those intimately concerned feel that the season has been as good if not better than any before.

The number of spectators was unusually small. This condition may have been due to the fact that the games were played on Monday morning. Those who did come were rewarded with good, scrappy games and close scores.

And the Crowd Cheered

Enthusiastically for Princeton; Zealously for Yale.

The Women's Gymnasium is packed to the very doors. Such a mad rushing, scrambling and jostling for seats has never been seen before. Everybody can tell the Yale supporters by their elaborate display of the blue and white. They all sit together on one side of the gym. Opposite them you see the gorgeous black and orange of Princeton. Just listen to them yell and cheer. They cheer everybody and everything. But what are those little chaps doing, who are running around with a basket slung over their arm? Why selling peanuts, popcorn and ice-cream cones to be sure. And for the G. F. A. too.

Oh, See the Stunts!

Look at those fair picturesque damsels, each leading by a string a queer four-legged creature robed in white and blue. Now they are singing. That is the Webster stunt. Here comes "gastric juice" writhing around in a horrible manner. It manages to consume a lettuce sandwich and various other articles of diet but is completely non-plussed when it comes in contact with "Yale,"—the indigestible. Hooray for Yale! But, who comes here? It is Woodrow Wilson and there trailing in the rear is a little black and orange beast, who performs wonderful gymnastic feats to the infinite amusement of his audience. Now it is Princeton's turn to shriek triumphantly. They are sure to win.

Here Come the Teams.

The two quintets rush out on the floor and begin to toss the ball into the basket. "Gus" Jewett is the referee. She blows the whistle and the game is on. It is close, but not especially thrilling or exciting. There is no brilliant star playing. The girls are too excited. It is a neck to neck contest. Now Princeton leads, now Yale and it is a toss-up which team will come out victorious. The captains, Allene Coffland of Princeton and Sarah Jones of Yale urge on their teams with great vigor.

Between halves and during "time out" the cheer leaders get busy, and the air is rent with song and cheer. One can not help noticing these fantastically dressed little cheer-leaders. They are so active.

The End Has Come.

The whistle blows and the score-board announces the fact the score stands 18-17 in favor of Yale. The team gathers excitedly in the middle of the floor and gives one long last yell for Yale. They have won and by one point.

THE ACADEMY

The New Academy

The Academy has at last "come in" for a share of the general prosperity which has been enjoyed by the college for many years. The Academy's portion so far has consisted principally of two very generous gifts: one the gift of twenty-six acres of land with one large building and four smaller ones; the other a gift of $25,000 by Mr. Charles M. Hall, a trustee of the college, for remodelling these buildings and adapting them to the uses of the Academy.

All who have been in Oberlin this year, know that the new home of the Academy is the former Johnson residence on South Professor Street. The transformation from a private residence to a modern school took place in the summer of 1912. The large family dwelling has become a thoroughly well-equipped and commodious recitation building with all the up-to-date facilities and conveniences. It contains twelve comfortable, well-lighted and well-heated recitation rooms, one large study room, offices for the Principal and the Dean of Academy girls, each with a pleasant waiting room, and two rest rooms, one for the women teachers and the other for the Academy girls. Of the four smaller buildings, one furnishes a well-adapted lecture room and laboratories for the department of Physics, and offices for the Secretary of the Academy; another furnishes laboratories and recitation facilities for the departments of Botany and Zoology; a third furnishes a large, unusually pleasant recitation room; and it is hoped that the fourth may soon become the Academy chapel.

The grounds, ample, with broad stretches of well-kept lawns relieved by fine trees and many varieties of rare shrubs, offer every opportunity for the continued growth of the Academy.

But this does not end the list of the recent material improvements. Dormitories for the accommodation of the Academy students must be added. The residence of General Shurtleff was purchased last summer and remodeled for use as a women's dormitory, the preference to be given to Academy girls. It is known as Shurtleff Cottage. The dormitory, or dormitories for Academy boys have not yet taken so definite and tangible a form, but are well under way. One at least is fully assured for use next fall.

All this good fortune in improved equipment has had the inevitable effect of arousing a spirit of increased enthusiasm among all those interested in the Academy. The students are eager to add their strength to the upward push by increased loyalty in supporting their own interests and by working directly for the improvement of the grounds and buildings. There are signs also that the graduates and former students are feeling a revival of interest in the welfare of the Academy and are making plans to add their contributions. With all these forces steadily working for its advancement, the Academy may confidently be expected to come into its own and be recognized as what it has always been,—one of the best preparatory schools in the country.

Class of 1913

The Senior Class of Oberlin Academy is perhaps the most happy and the most co-operative class that has graduated from the Academy in years. Two fundamentals bring this about. One is that we are proud of the new grounds and building, which make such a splendid background for our social affairs; the other, that as a class we have tried to set a high standard of friendship.

The class has made a change this year in regard to parties. The fall and winter terms each saw one party, organized primarily for the purpose of getting acquainted and building up friendships. Three social functions are planned for the spring term. The first will be given to the Middle class; the second is to be a reception to all the athletic teams of the Academy; the last and best will take place in June, when the Seniors plan to enjoy their final good time together. The second affair is to be a departure from the established custom of giving a reception to the football team alone. We feel that all the athletic teams should be honored for their efficient work.

On the nineteenth of June seventy of the class of nineteen thirteen will receive their diplomas. The class is especially notable because it has an equal number of men and women, an unheard of event in Oberlin.

If she goes with all the boys, she's a coquette. If she prefers a “steady,” she couldn't get anyone else.

If she majors in Chem. or Greek, she's queer. If she doesn't, she's looking for snap courses.

If she is athletic, she loses her maidenly charms. If she is not, well, girls can't do very much anyway.

If she asserts herself in class, she is strongheaded. If she does not, she hasn't any brains.

If she doesn't talk much she's uninteresting. If she does, she's a bore.

GROUP OF OBERLIN BUSINESS COLLEGE STUDENTS TAKEN FEBRUARY 20, 1913, IN FRONT OF SPEAR LABORATORY

THE present year breaks all records for attendance at the Oberlin Business College. In consequence, the above is the largest group of students ever brought together in one photograph. It was necessary to erect five rows of seats at each side of the broad steps leading into the building to accommodate the students. Two hundred and fifty students were enrolled from September 1, 1912, to March 1, 1913, a period of six months.

These students come from all parts of Ohio and other states and a few from other countries and are said to be older and better educated than those of any other business college in the country. Schools and Teachers' Agencies are constantly sending to Oberlin for teachers of commercial branches. Business firms at Cleveland, Elyria, Lorain, Akron and other cities, having business colleges of their own, are constantly sending to the Oberlin Business College when in need of first class office help. Any student who takes the thorough training offered at this school is certain of a good position.

"CAD" JANITORS.

Thrice welcome again to our old institution
 Ye heterogeneous, rule-breaking "Cads!"
 To the town's wealth you make but a small contribution,
 But you get what you want—and it's charged to your dads.
 Have your fling if you will; sow your tares in profusion,
 But keep a few tons of good coal in your bin;
 And there'll come a wild hour of despair and confusion
 If you don't make your time count at old Oberlin.

With the fifth month of the year,
If Fate be kind and you be near
"Leaning up" old Talcott Tree
Gazing southward wonderingly.
Down Professor you may sight
A gay young company, bedight
In gala wear of richest hue,
Handsome youths and maidens, too,
Round a May-pole on the green
Crowning high their beauteous queen,
I note the question in your eye,
I hasten quick to make reply—
In pranks and dance of old-time May
'Tis Baldwin Cottage at its play.

You've heard of Keep, the grand new dorm,
Run under strange conditions,
It's cozy nooks and antique clock,
Its wondrous new traditions.
The hall some folks may call Keep Inn,
And others name Keep Out;
But under any name a place
We could not do without.

If you wish to know the place
Where grim hunger hides her face;
Where jolly pranks and parties gay
End the heavy laboring day;
Where receptions, grave and splendid
Are by faculty attended;
Where P. T.'s with healthy faces
Bow and smile with gentle graces
On poor theologues, who find
That the world's still good and kind;
If content you wish to be
Dascomb Cottage you must see.

Yes, I eat in the house by the side of the Plum,
Where the 'Cademy men go by;
The men who are fat, the men who are lean,
Less lean and more fat than I.
I cannot eat where Inn they Keep
Nor under Talcott's tree.
Yes, I eat in a house by the side of the Plum,
"Tis Lord that feedeth me."

Oberlin, Ohio

Have you heard of the house that's across from Pyle Inn?

A stronghold it is, to be sure.
With two spacious porches and rails wide enough
A pretty fair strain to endure.
Some folks might consider the name rather strong,
I'll admit it connotes things exciting
But what's in a name?—If you'll come I am sure
You'll find our "Grey Gables" inviting.

'Tis said there dwelt a family
In Oberlin somewhere,
With which, in size, undoubtedly
None other could compare.
A hundred souls and fifty more
Three times a day poured through the door.

Twas fitting such a monstrous host
Should live where all could see
And of a pleasant home should boast,
And have a family tree.
So I was built with tower tall,
And people call me Talcott Hall.

Down on West College's northern side
There is a house all view with pride.
Its girls are pretty, trim and neat;
Its boys are handsome ath-el-eats.
Its matron is not too severe;
And if at springtime of the year
You wander down to Mrs. Pyle's
We're sure you will be met with smiles.

There stands upon a little slope
A stately home, that of the Pope.
And every night a monstrous horde
Of fussers visit old Cranford.
At the loud stroke of that dread knell
The seven thirty chapel bell,
The strollers part or sit at ease
Among the pillars in the breeze.

Alice Nielsen's Appreciation

"Just a word to thank you for supplying the splendid A. B. CHASE Concert Grand Piano for me at my second Des Moines Concert. This is a beautiful instrument, and lends itself in a most satisfying way to the voice.

To prove to you how well I like it, I have requested the local dealer here in Waterloo to supply us with another A. B. CHASE Piano for this evening's concert.

Again thanking you,

Yours very sincerely,

Miss Spencer, at reception for new students (gushingly): "Where are you from? What, no one from Indiana? I could just hug anybody from Indiana."

Little fellow, behind her: "I'm from Indiana."

Professor Sherman cracks a "sad" one: "I don't see why so many married people go west to get Renovated."

Freshman Bible, early in October: "Professor Hutchins, is that Freshman prayer meeting compulsory?"

Professor Wolfe, in Economics 1: "Will the class please volunteer to name something that may be called a scarcity."

In turn; Vrooman: "Money"; Pay: "Platinum;" "Johnny" Work: "Pickles," Professor Wolfe: "No more—No more. You have the wrong idea. Apparently the scarcest thing in this class is brains."

The Shoe for Sandal

By RICHARD BRIM CHERRY

Dramatis Personae

LADY FITS.....	JOSEPH SNUFF
LADY SNEEZE.....	CHARLES SNUFF
SIR PIKER SNEEZE	SERVANT

Curtain rises disclosing Joseph in his library with servant.

Joseph: "No letter from Lady Fits?"

Servant: "No, Sir."

Joseph: "I am surprised she has not sent it if she is prevented from coming. However, she will eventually arrive, for the woman who blights the rose of patience by being prompt can never—hey! who the d— Why, here she comes; and Lady Sneeze, with her, why, and Sir Piker, too. They've been in conference, I doubt not."

(Enter Lady Fits, Lady Sneeze, and Sir Piker. Exit servant.)

"Walk in, Ladies. Sir Piker, your very devoted—Will you not do me the honor to sit down? Oh, the play, is it? Well, tell me what you have expurgated, for the man who values local color and literature above false modesty is ever sure to appear pedantic.

Lady Fits: "Ah, Mr. Snuff. It is a joy to find you in harmony with our maturer judgement. These copies you see" (handing each a small red paper-covered booklet) "have been expurgated. All the undesirable matter has been left unmarked. Thus, that work is permissible; we have indicated it with a check mark. Now, that the next sentence begins with a D—so we went no further into it, for fear of contaminating ourselves. But, you see, this next sentence is all allowed, after purging it of the predicate and the modifying adjectives of the subject.

Joseph: "Why this method is truly original, Lady Fits. Isn't it Lady Sneeze?"

Lady Sneeze: "Original! Why, it's more than that, it's picturesque. The check marks make the pages look like the flies on Tanglefoot in January. Oh, Sir Piker, see this—Why Lady Fits, this page has seven, no, eight check marks! And here's a word allowed that begins with H—! And here's a whole sentence conveying some general thought! Joseph, I'll read the purified version,—'Your Uncle Oliver'—then you'll find—be—. That—to me, is as—a looking—as ever I saw; an—eye, and a—countenance! An—depend on it. Don't you think so—Premium?' "

Joseph: The general thought! Aye, and more too. Egad—I mean Yes—and by heaven—I mean—I think it's some improvement on the original. When a speech is befogged with useless diction, it resembles a landscape shrouded in rolling clouds.

Sir Piker: I' faith that's true, Lady Fits. Joseph is a man of sentiment. What! Have you expurgated the Dramatis Personae too?

Lady Fits. Why of course, Sir Piker. How doltish, how intellectually paralyzed, how morally calloused you appear! Certain characters give unwarranted applause to inefficiency. Such are never beneficial to the adolescent.

(Enter Charles.)

Charles. Oh, He— —ahem, what have we here? Good day, Ladies and Gentlemen. Aye, always improving yourself. Brother? What, that old Play again! Ha, ha, ha. I almost forgot. We're to be expurgated. I think that's a rare joke. Ha, ha, ha. To have one's character polished and scratched, checked and patched—ha, ha, ha.

Joseph. For shame, Charles. He who can laugh at the tender concern of Lady Fits—

Charles. Oh, sure. Egad, as you were saying.—But what's this, Lady Fits. Can't Sir Oliver wear his Indian Sandal?

Lady Fits. Oh, to be sure not. Why such indecent — —

Sir Piker. I — — I — — I — — I'll tell them (aside) Hark'ee, Charles. Oh, Joseph. Sir Oliver can't wear a sandal, he'll have to have a shoe instead. We'll call the play the Shoe for Sandal.

(Benevolent laughter.)

Lady Sneezle. Why Lady Fits you have expurgated my little flower boy!

Joseph. What? Let me see. Hey, the mischief. And I'm cut out.

Charles. Ha, ha, ha. A rare joke, Lady Fits. The devil, I'm expurgated too. I'll be — —

Sir Piker. Lady Fits, Lady Fits. I'll not bear it. All the rest are expurgated, and I alone — —

Lady Sneezle. Sir Piker, you are ruled off too, because you lose your temper.

Sir Piker. 'S death, Madam, this will immortalize you. Now Lady Sneezle, and nephews, we are united once more; we are freed from this lady's ethico-religious company.

Charles. Ha, ha, ha. And I think that we owe a great deal to those men of letters who prefer local color and forceful English. Ha, ha, ha. I'm glad we're expurgated.

Curtain.

Professor Sherman, after the faculty had refused "Paola and Francesca" as the Junior play: "I don't know whether Mother Goose could pass the faculty unless she were properly expurgated."

Artz, strolling by Tobin's: "Say, Jelliffe, what do you think of the girl I've got with me now?"

Harry Hayden: "Say, Dave, if you've got a picture of her with Jim don't put it in the Hi-O-Hi, for my sake."

Board Member: "Know any jokes, Grub?"

G. Clark: "No. What have I to do with the evanescent effervescences of temperamental imbecility? Or the transient ebullitions of scurrility?"

WOMEN

Our ladies' department is distinct and original. The styles we show embrace all varieties of garments, from plain tailor-made suits to the cleverest fancy creations of the best French Artists, including, Paquin, Bichoff-Davis, Drecol, Callot-Soeurs, etc.

And remember please that our prices are no higher than you would pay for good ready made garments.

MEN

The steady patronage we are getting year in and year out, from the best dressed men and women in Cleveland and elsewhere, is as good reference as I can offer. These people would no more tolerate poor service from us, than they would from any other tailor. Clothes buying is not a matter of sentiment.

Oh! Ye Students!!

BEAR IN MIND AND
DON'T FORGET

Our pocket knives are all warranted, all beautiful, all students' sizes. Our scissors are keen cutters, all double-edged all nickeled and all right. Our brass headed tacks are all sharp, all look like gold, all better than gold for the uses for which they were made.

Yours affectionately,

"Faith, it's curious," said a traveled Irishman, "how these little disease insects are called in different countries. In Germany they call 'em germs; in Paris parasites, and in Ireland we call 'em mike-robies."

Increase Your Efficiency

100 Per Cent.

No matter how well educated you may be, or what profession you adopt, a commercial education is absolutely necessary. If you will take a complete business training in our college you can easily increase your salary and chances for advancement at least 100 per cent.

We offer you the only two-story, brick building in Ohio owned by any Business College and devoted entirely to training in up-to-date business methods, and this is the only school in Northern Ohio teaching STENOTYPE. With our system of individual instruction, experienced teachers, light, large and well ventilated rooms, free from the interruptions of other tenants, we are offering you unexcelled opportunities. The fact that every graduate is employed should convince you that THIS IS the school for you.

At least 85% of our students are teachers and High School graduates. Individual instruction enables each person to finish the course he selects in the shortest time consistent with good work.

Complete courses in Bookkeeping, Graham Shorthand, Touch Typewriting, Penmanship, English and Stenotype are given. Special training is given those who wish to teach any of the above subjects.

WHAT IS "THE STENOTYPE?" It is a machine for taking dictation, to be used instead of note book and pen. Prints a word at a stroke. Think of it! And it's printed in plain English letters, so your notes never get cold, and any Stenotypist can read them. If interested send for booklet "593 words in one minute, blindfolded."

THE DEMAND FOR OUR GRADUATES AS TEACHERS in Business Colleges and Commercial Departments of High Schools is much greater than the supply, the salaries for beginners ranging from $65 to $90 per month.

Send for Information. Visitors Always Welcome.

"The Stenotype School"

"I didn't get to chapel today. Had to shave."

"Missed chapel by a close shave, did you?"

Dictograph readings from Rice's studio: "All here? Who is missing? Now the tall gentleman right here please. No. You with the red tie. You little fellows will have to sit in front. Now come up close, please. Closer. Closer. Oh, Mr. Fifield, you never will get close enough. Now. Now. O-oh, please be nice, gentlemen, and don't laugh. Miss Morey, be a lady. Smile a little. Turn the head just a trifle. There. There. Not so much. Steady. There! Now all still. Only a moment. Look at me So. So. Now steady. (click) We'll have to take another, the little short gentleman moved."

Mr. Rice: "Mr. Shaw, lean that way a little."

Guy Hickok: "Dave Shaw never leans toward the right."

Professor Lord: "Miss C. what was Juevenal's ultimate end?"

Miss C.: "Death, I suppose."

Professor Lord: "No, I mean after that."

N. Hubbard, in Chemistry, reading: "'Add $H_2 SO_4$ and ignite.' Professor Menzies, where is the ignite?"

Lucile: "I found a button in the salad today."

Erling: "That's all right, it belonged to the dressing."

Today good advertising is literature — business literature — we call it.

The Artcraft Company are producers of business literature—well appearing, impressive—effective.
